What is Unlisted Thoughts?

Well, you should be asking why is Unlisted Thoughts? You can even ask how is Unlisted Thoughts?

Unlisted Thoughts is a project between two (maybe more) friends who like to waste time and laugh at randomness. Unlisted Thoughts began in late-2019 and has been going strong ever since! If we stop posting stuff, it's because we got bored at using this moniker!

In other words, Unlisted Thoughts exist as a way for a group of certain someones to separate themselves from their work in a very literal sense. The shenanigans that goes on with Unlisted Thoughts does not entirely represent the views of the people who contribute to it—even if it's not too hard to find who owns this document.

Unlisted Thoughts is more than just grammatical errors through machine translation. Unlisted Thoughts is about the humorous banter that sparks the crazy media you have seen us post; it is about the laughs that come from what we post.

Therefore, I think it is safe to say that Unlisted Thoughts is a giant in-joke which you, as a member of the public, have access to.

If you spot any grammatical or spelling mistakes, then we're sorry. We might fix it if it was unintentional but aside from that, we offer you our most sincere apologies and vow to reduce the frequency of such mistakes. We might also remind you that you are reading a document dedicated to English.

There is not really much else to this aside from information about the Wikipedia disambiguation page for the term US. There's a reason we styled it, About US, and it's not just to make this big document any larger. Lo and behold, here you go:

Yes, this is the type of humour we here at Unlisted Thoughts like to see.

There might just be a name or two affixed to this document but believe me, what you see inside of this document is a culmination of a lot of wasted time. Now, go ahead and please enjoy the monstrosity that is The English Archives Volume I (2017 - 2020). If you want to know about me as a person, you're not going to find any information here.

The Engrish Archive

Note from the editor: The format of this entire document is very simple. You have a title, then you have the original text with some formatting. Below that is the bastardisation that is the result of throwing the original into Google Translate with the intention on turning it into Engrish. Have fun.

A Message To The Reader

ORIGINAL

This document is a collection of weird English phrases which have been put into Google Translate and translated through a multitude of languages (Chinese, Yiddish, Japanese, maybe Yiddish again, Arabic, etc.) before being translated back to English to give the result what we, in the world of Wambon, would consider Engrish or Broken English. This is because while the words and grammar may or may not be correct, the meaning is completely lost often to hilarious results. The question now is why would a bunch of people do this. The answer is simple: teenagers have a lot of spare time on their hands and have access to the internet.

Sincerely,
W. L. Witherspoon

RESULTS

The above documents have been translated into Google Translate and translated many interesting English phrases into different languages. (Chinese, Japanese, Japanese and may be Arabic and Arabic). Can be translated into English, English or English. This is because words and grammar may be true or false. But because of interesting results, the meaning is often missing. The question is, why are the people doing this The answer is easy. Young people have a lot of time and internet.

In 1945, Dr Julius Robert Oppenheimer stated after the atomic Trinity test that:

"While witnessing the explosion, he thought of a verse from the Hindu holy book, the Bhagavad Gita (XI,12):

प्रत्यनीकेषु योधाः॥११- ३२॥

If the radiance of a thousand suns were to burst at once into the sky, that would be like the splendor of the mighty one ...

Years later he would explain that another verse had also entered his head at that time:

We knew the world would not be the same. A few people laughed, a few people cried. Most people were silent. I remembered the line from the Hindu scripture, the Bhagavad Gita; Vishnu is trying to persuade the Prince that he should do his duty and, to impress him, takes on his multi-armed form and says, 'Now I am become Death, the destroyer of worlds.' I suppose we all thought that, one way or another."

An Introduction To Hansard

ORIGINAL

Dr ROSS JOHNSON (MINER'S WAY—Leader of the Opposition)(14:32): The speaker is a liar, Madam Speaker, the Speaker is a partial and partisan liar who deliberately misled the parliament.

THE SPEAKER: The Leader of the Opposition will withdraw his remarks immediately!

Dr JOHNSON: I will not withdraw the remarks because, as I've said—

THE SPEAKER: I name the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr RYAN WEATHERS (HOUSE—Leader of the House, Minister for Agriculture): I move:

That the member for Miner's Way be suspended from the services of the House.

Note from the editor: The Hansard is the transcripts of Parliamentary debates in many Commonwealth legislatures, including the United Kingdom and Australia. The Hansard was naturally named after Thomas Curson Hansard. You will see excerpts from the Hansard and fictional ones invented by myself.

Honourable members interjecting—

The SPEAKER: Order! Members on my left! The question is that the member be suspended from the services of the House.

As many are of that opinion say aye.

Honourable members: Aye!

The SPEAKER: To the contrary no.

Honourable members: No!

The SPEAKER: I think the ayes have it.

Honourable members: Noes have it.

The SPEAKER: Noes have it? Division required. Ring the bells for four minutes.

The bells having been rung—

The SPEAKER: Lock the doors! Order! The question is that the member be suspended from the services of the House. The ayes will pass to the right of the chair, the noes to left. I appoint the members for Crook and Marles teller for the ayes and the members for Green and Morrison teller for the noes.

A division having taken place—

The SPEAKER: Order! The result of the divisions is ayes: 79, noes: 65. The question is therefore resolved in the affirmative. The member for Heed is suspended from the services of the House for 24 hours.

Question agreed to.

The member for Heed then left the chamber.

Barnaby Joyce Goes Crazy!!!

ORIGINAL

Mr JOYCE (New England) (10:37): I move:

That this bill be now read a second time.

It is an anomaly in our nation that 70 per cent of our nation is represented by less than four per cent of the members in the House of Representatives. It is also an anomaly in our nation, in the West-Washington system—where the House of Representatives is based on the Westminster system and the Senate is based on the Washington system—that we have never actually developed new states, so we have vast swathes of our nation that don't have Senate representation. It is generally the case that 11 out of 12 senators come from the capital cities. We've seen that in Western Australia—I believe currently—South Australia, Victoria and even in New South Wales, where 11 out of 12 come from Sydney or Wollongong. What this means is vast swathes of our nation in a geographic area do not have a Senate representation. Not only that, but Indigenous Australians, who are calling for a voice to parliament, are missing a voice in parliament.

What we need is six regions per state, which we can do by an act of this parliament. No region of those six should be bigger than 30 per cent of the state, and no urban basin should be more than one region. It would not be unusual when you consider that, in the United States, New York has two senators—but, in Australia, Adelaide has 11. We need to make sure, as the seats get bigger and bigger and bigger in the House of Representatives in regional areas, that this is offset by the capacity to get more Senate representation. What we have in the Constitution—this does not need a referendum—is the capacity within chapter 1, part 2, clause 7, where it states:

The Senate shall be composed of senators for each State, directly chosen by the people of the State, voting, until the Parliament otherwise provides, as one electorate...

So an amendment of the parliament can change how the parliament decides—this is something that is so important. If we had two senators per region, one would get in, I imagine, on around about 40 per cent of the vote, one would get in on around about 30 per cent and the rest of the vote would exhaust. This means that in areas such as the Gulf of Carpentaria we have a great chance of Indigenous representation. And in the Kimberley and in other areas of Western Australia—maybe western New South Wales—we have the capacity to have Indigenous representation in one of the most powerful elected bodies of this nation, the Senate. Of course it would also mean that we'd have offices in regional areas which people would have access to. And, to be quite frank, senators would have something that they haven't had for quite some time: constituents, who walk in the door with requirements on NDIS, on issues pertinent to health and education; and they mightn't reside, in many instances, in one building in the centre of town, where you have to go through security to get access to.

We need for our Senate to have a constituency and to have the capacity to represent a geographic area. It wouldn't take much for a competent representative to get elected if they required about 30 per cent of the vote—a competent independent could do it, or, obviously, a competent member of the Labor Party, a competent member of the Liberal Party, a competent member of the National Party or the Greens. It is not at the exclusion of any party. It's at the inclusion, but it gives the regions vastly more say in how they do this.

Mr Speaker, I'm not going to suspend standing orders—people have asked me about that—but I reserve the right to do so in the future. This has been within the National Party policy. We've come to federal conferences and argued for this. I can't see the point of people coming to federal conferences if you don't actually follow through with what they want; it's just a talkfest. We should be able to stand behind issues like this and see them through.

In the last election, the Labor Party got one senator up in Queensland, so things are not working well for them. The Labor Party, itself, should be looking strongly at how they represent the views of the constituency that they wish to represent in areas such as Central Queensland or Far North Queensland or the Gulf. Maybe in so doing they'd have the capacity to turn policy in such a way as to temper some of the effects that happen when you get an overurbanisation of the vote. Remember, the vast number of the votes in this place are from the capital cities. It is perverse to think there's an even greater representation of senators from capital cities so that, when an issue goes through, it has not only the benefit of the vast majority of the numbers in the House of Representatives, it's also got the support of the vast majority of people in the Senate.

The United States created pastoral states, and, by so doing, they had two senators per state. This gave greater representation. We seem to be completely at odds with creating new states, so the only way to do it—to get this representation of Indigenous people, of regional areas and a better balance—is to have regional senators, who were noted before. I see the member for Kennedy here, who's seconding this bill. I'm going to allow the rest of my time for him to speak.

RESULTS

Mr. JOYCE (New England) (10:37): Did I mention:

This is the second time he is reading.

Our population estimates that 70% of our population is less than 4%. The inevitable Washington system for our citizens - where Parliament established Westminster and formed the Washington Senate - did not create a new state, so fewer voters would vote for our state. The city has 7 senate members from the other 12 cities. We've seen them in Australia, and in my opinion right now - in South Australia, Victoria and South Wales, out of 11 out of 12 in Sydney or Wollong. This means that in our article this is an important sign, we have no parliament. Not only that, but the Australian who invited the polls was missing.

We need six countries at a time, and we can do that in cooperation. None of these six countries represents more than 30% of them, and more than half do not. New York senators are rare in the United States. There are 11 senators in Adelaide, Australia. Public Chat Chat Lounge Ha E ha yM. Sections 7 and 7 of the Constitution require a referendum.

The Power House is chosen by a few caches from each country and by the people of that country.

Voting may change. The main problem is that if there are two short votes in the area, most people will think that 40% of votes are 30%, i.e. 1 vote. It offers many opportunities for locals in the region, including Kimberley and Western Australia (New South Wales, South Wales). Senate In practice this is often the case with startups serving the public. Obviously the senator will pass by. NDS voters want health and education. And most of the time, they don't live in cities that need image security

Somewhere the Senate is needed Once the vote is approved, no other members are needed. If you are a direct or indirect member of a local company, you need up to 30%. This issue is not a member or shooter. Provide the opportunity to demonstrate your practice while keeping in touch.

Lord, I do not violate moral standards, but I have the right to work from home. The reason is Comiten politics. Attend meetings and consultations with the federal government. If you don't know or don't attend the meeting, this is a proud process. The problem has been identified and resolved.

That was unlikely in the last election as Leybary pushed for the Queensland legislature. Employees need to see how they are displayed in cities that want to see places like Central Queensland, North Queensland, and the Bay Area. Therefore, it is possible to formulate guidelines that reduce the impact of multiple voices. Remember, many are in the capital area. One that assume that an old man senior in the capital. Once the issue has been resolved, most DPR representatives not only support it, but also support the House of Representatives. Mostly the Senate.

The United States pays two cents a week. It shows us that we accept and believe that a new government will be formed. The only way for a local senator to get emotion is to choose the place and the right place for who they are. He takes over as Kennedy's second-stage supervisor. I always remember talking.

Statement By The Assistant Minister To The Deputy Prime Minister, Mr Andrew Gee

ORIGINAL

Mr GEE (Calare—Assistant Minister to the Deputy Prime Minister) (16:47): As we head into this Christmas period, it is a time to reflect on all that this parliament has achieved over the last 12 months—and there have been many achievements of this government, although it's not the purpose of my contribution this afternoon to recount and go into all of those achievements. But it's also a chance to look into the future and what this next period—what we might call the holiday season—holds. For our country communities, it holds concerns. We are very concerned about this ongoing drought that continues to creep across country Australia and strangle our country communities. Many of our communities have not had significant rain now for years. Many either have run out of water or are on the verge of running out of water. As we head into this Christmas season, we are met with a great deal of concern from people in country New South Wales and country Australia. It is shaping up to be a very long, hot, dry summer. We reflect on the strain that has already been put on our emergency services personnel. One of the great things that Australians do when times are tough and the chips are down is that we come together and support each other, and we're particularly good at that in country Australia.

So, as we head into this Christmas season, I would just like to wish all of our country communities, particularly our farmers and our farm related businesses, the best, and let them know that the thoughts of this House are with them.

I would particularly like to let all of our emergency services personnel know that they have the thanks and appreciation of our communities, because in New South Wales, I know, and all over Australia they have been contributing to the recent bushfire efforts. It has been inspirational. So I wish them a quiet Christmas, although with all fear that it may not be so. To all of those hardworking men and women out there, our first responders, can I just wish you all the best and pass on the heartfelt thanks of a grateful community and a grateful country.

RESULTS

GEE (KELEL: Deputy Prime Minister) (16:47): As we enter, it is time to reflect on what Congress has done in the past 12 months - and this government is very successful. Not for my friend. All of these results will be discussed this afternoon and will be shared with you. However, there is still room to see the future and what we call the holidays. This is a matter for the communities in our country. We care about the ongoing drought across Australia. Over the years, our community has not had much rain. Too much or too much water is exposed to water. As we enter this Christmas season, we are worried about the people in New South Wales and Australia. The shape is long, hot and dry in summer. We think about the stress that emergency workers are working on. One of the key things Australians need to do in difficult times and chips is to come together and support each other and be the best in Australia.

So, as we enter Christmas season, I want to bless all the communities in our country, especially farmers and farms, and I want them to know that the idea of this house is with them.

In fact, I know that they have contributed to the recent forests in New South Wales and Australia because I want to thank our community and all our staff for their support. Motivation. So I hope they have a safe Christmas, and I'm worried there will be no Christmas. Thank you to all the men and women who work here, the first responders, to a grateful community and to the grateful country and to all the good and sincere.

COURIER-NI: I'm trying to stop the development:

President Donald John Trump is debating.

Members of the Government agree

GUARD: Commander! Turner! The forest is to my right!

Helvetica Speaking-

GUARD: Commander! Helvetica theme! Helvetica theme!

Collection of past meetings -

GOOD NEWS: on my feet. So, I ask what the offer is?

Don't leave him.

DEPUTY CHAIRMAN OF AMNESTY: Divorce is not allowed At this time, before trying to make the next order to the board, I would like to clarify that it is not the responsibility of the board to give these recommendations to board staff. Whatever it is, it can all be wrong.

G. IMPACT: This is as good as a president for you.

GUARD: Commander! You need to leave early

EFFECT: I'm allergic.

SO: do it. The president was not satisfied with the board members.

She works outside the room.

FOURTH CHILD: As a non-religious church, we do not need to commit such violence. So, we know who has and who knows, I called the new Speaker of the House of Representatives.

COURIER-NI: I'm trying to stop the development:

If the president's plan fails, the minister orders the president-elect and another president to declare war on Japan.

Collection of past meetings -

GUARD: Commander! Turner! The answer came from both sides! The thief is on the left! Turner!

TRABUCHET MS: Ron, you're a genius. There is no real threat.

CHAPTER 4: Trebuchet MS Design Design Award!

Marketing-New Carrera

Collection of past meetings -

GLOBAL DONATION: new and clear! My feet are standing above my feet! Turner! I ask for the order issued by the court.

Mr. Carrera: I want you to be president.

Day 2: I'm the next president.

Collection of past meetings -

GUARD: Commander! Turner!

Collection of past meetings -

WHERE I AM: Books! I called Trebuchet, MMS consultant.

The right side appears

CHECK OUT THE LATEST ANNOUNCEMENTS: Yes, never mind. Do you want to repeat what he said?

Black Ariel: It's different.

Yes, Chairman: Vice President is not in the election for director Ariel Black.

Mom ... Ariel goes into the dark room.

EVENT-BASED THEMES: Talk to Trabuchet M.S.

Mrs. Trabechet: I'm going.

SO: do it. I am the name and shame of the help message.

Turn left.

FOURTH CHILD: I will name a few to my surprise! I don't care about the boss.

Franklin Jick (Chairman of the Security Council): I'm leaving;

They were pulled from Security Council services outside of America, this time the President hearing at the National Conference about their shoes.

Second eye: this is a problem.

View opposition members-

GUARD: Commander! Turner! I remember the youth for the last time. I think so. This is the problem

Miss Georgia: You're awesome!

Chairman's Question: Attorney General, back.

Mrs. Georgia: I'm going

FOURTH CHILD: The new president is not acidic in the Georgia electorate. Remember to change your course.

The Georgia lawyer left the office.

US SECRETARY OF STATE: The question is whether the branch will be closed out of state, and whether the seats will be allocated on a temporary basis.

Answer: Snow recommended 26 (of 4) years 22

Word was broken.

(Vice Chairman- Mr. Zuo)

Answer the question

Connector, you must love its shoes.

Churches were arrested and went to the office

A Presentation Script Relating To 1984

ORIGINAL

[REDACTED]

FEAR! Now, that that's out of the way, I think it's best if we define something. [CUT]

The way I see it, what changes an objective recount of some random event is your baggage: it's your own emotions and memories—essentially your context. This shapes how you witness said event and so builds human experiences.

I now have a word for you: [CUT] fear.

It represents something that's quite prevalent in the two texts [CUT] I have before you today: Schindler's List, a film directed by Steven Spielberg, [CUT] and 1984 by everyone's favourite, George Orwell. [CUT]

It's no wonder that the texts depict fear quite extensively seeing that they both involve [CUT] the National Socialist German Workers' Party or the Nazi Party. [CUT] If it wasn't a give-away, cast your eyes on the [CUT] English Socialist Party or Ingsoc who "the Nazis came very close to"—I'll go back to this.

The Inner Party do not care about the proles. Let's me rephrase that—the Party does not care for individuals. It's why they can just vaporise anyone they want; it's why they can just wipe you [CUT] from the history books. And this apathy to human dignity, ironically perpetrated by humans beings, is confronting and gives us, the responder, our own experiences that is gained from the novel. [CUT]

So, I'm gonna flip to a random page... and bingo! I have a little exchange here between good ol' Winston and Julia—it's the culmination of Part 2. Let's play spot the technique. Past [Redacted], anything to say? [CUT]

Thank for highlighting the repetition. If you haven't noticed by the imagery which follows, the lovely couple is trembling in terror—they know their fate. They know what entails being caught by the Thought Police. Of course, this is only one piece of the puzzle, have a look at this foreshadowing. [CUT]

It establishes how the Thought Police operates—kinda gives you a hint of what will happen to Winston. The metaphor uses these grisly terms such as corpses and graves because are you really alive when you lost all freedom? [CUT]

Is living in constant fear really living? [CUT]

Schindler's List says 'yes' because things will one day change for the good. You will notice that the rest of it is in black and white [CUT] or monochrome. It's not Spielberg didn't have the resources to film in colour, no. [CUT]

Instead, I like to think that it reflects the fact that World War 2 was a very, very dark [CUT] age for Jewish culture. You see, the movie actually begins and ends in colour. It's this contrast in the colour palette or lack thereof highlights that this was history. [CUT] There's a certain authenticity because, for me, Schindler's List functions like a documentary. We are led to believe that the brutal killings on screen are real. [CUT]

I'm gonna show you a short little clip... [CUT] you heard the piano, right? It's all diegetic. This is what I would call aural dissonance—there's disharmony between music and gunfire. Look at that soldiers there, there's people are getting shot to death and someone's playing the piano. These rapid cuts—they build to this. Look at how the soldiers are dressed: all in black—i.e. death. [CUT – should now be GIF]

What we have here might have been the final experiences for hundreds if not thousands of people. And I would say Schindler's List does them justice. It is through these close-ups that we get the emotions—you know they're scared. And for Oskar Schindler, he's horrified and disgusted by the atrocities. This drove him to do his great deed that I won't spoil. [CUT]

To conclude, Schindler's List and 1984 are products of fear. Spielberg depicted the struggles the Jewish people which involved fear. 1984 was written in response to Orwell's own concerns with the rise in totalitarian regimes. This is why the Party is a symbol representing the Nazi Party—Hitler's Youth/Youth League. You see what I'm getting? [CUT]

You see, these texts can give us fear—they can do that quite effectively. In the end, we get this better understanding of human experiences through fear as it is something we all felt. Sure, we did not suffer what millions suffered during World War 2 but we do get our own reactions from these texts. This is how they depict human experiences.

We have the recount—Winston did this, Julia did that—but we get their reactions. We get their horror when they realise they have been caught. And best of all, it's through a novel!

You are not limited by the medium—dialogue works in both of these text types. Give your characters the experiences. Look at fear: do it with or without sound, Schindler's List has you covered.

So, if you want to show fear in texts, I sincerely hoped that you've been paying attention.

[CUT]

Why? Because I'm out of time.

Note from the editor: Younger me was a bit of an enlightened centrist but maybe even he knows that the Nazi Party targeted socialists and other left-leaning groups upon gaining power. Maybe he sees Ingsoc as a bastardisation of what socialism is—it's just using the name. The Party in 1984 is first and foremost a totalitarian regime.

Afraid to catch! Now that it has happened, I have a better idea of how to explain something.
[Jacquard]

In my opinion, changing the meaning of a regular meeting is very stressful. Your thoughts and emotions, especially your environment Emphasize your points and create a personal experience.

Then I told you: [Cut] I'm scared.

This is the most common case in some cases [CUT] today. Schindler Page, directed by Steven Spielberg, is George Orwell's best film of 1984.

Not surprisingly, the article was named the National Party of Socialist Workers or the Nazi Party.
[CUT] If you don't deny it, you will know that [CUT] is the Inksuk of the British National Guard or "close Nazi ally".

Back to that

Insiders don't care about art. I thought: no one cares about the group. That's why I can win anything. So I can publish articles from your manual. Interestingly, the light from this artificial kiss brings a contrast between experience and savior for this book. [Jacquard]

So I went through the empty page ... it's the contact between old Winston and Julia - it's the end of the second episode. To do business. [Redacted] left, what? [Jacquard]

Congratulations on your victory. If you do not know the image below, your beautiful friends will be afraid: I know your fate. They know what the police are thinking. Yeah, it's just part of the game. See this preview. [Jacquard]

It reminded the police - Winston was given the idea of what he had to do. Has the metaphor used nice words like lines and sailors because you really always live? [Go]

Is he once in awe? [Go]

Schindler's list is "yes" because things change for the better. You will see black and white or cut or monochrome. Spielberg was unable to fire. [Go]

I think it is a good time in Jewish culture to consider World War II. As you can see, the image starts and ends in color. This is compared to a color palette or lack of sun. [LAUGHTER] Schindler's List, which is a continuation of what I believe, works as a documentary. We believe that carnage occurs in the park. [Go]

I'll show you a little picture ... [text] You've heard the piano, have you? Something to the light. This is called hearing loss - the difference between music and knowledge. Look at the children when people turn and play the piano. This is a quick fix - they build on it. Look at the clothes of the soldiers, because they are all black. made. [Course - present gift time]

This is the true vision of thousands, if not thousands, we can achieve. I can say that Shindler also has a list. We get ideas with loved ones - you know they are scared. And for Oscar Schindler he is scared and scared. This made her the best and I will not disappoint. [Go]

In summary, Schindler's 1984 list produces two. Spielberg talked about the Jewish struggle against terror. It was written in 1984 in response to Orwell's concern about the rise of totalitarianism. So the Nazi Party symbol - Young Chain Hitler / Young do you know what I can find? [Go]

You see, those words can be scary for them - they can be very funny. Ultimately, we gain a general knowledge of the fear of those who fear because it is something we believe in. In fact, we did not have millions in World War II, but we have our own answer to the words. People interpret information in this way.

We keep telling the story - Winston does, Julia does - but it does. We recognize their fears and know that they are trapped. And most importantly, it is a natural way!

You are not limited to the environment - words work in both languages. Leave your photos Title: Cover Shindler's list of whether you're entertaining or not.

If you want to show fear on the way, I hope you know it.

Reflection Relating To A Presentation Script Relating To 1984

ORIGINAL

CHARLE THURMOND'S REFLECTION TASK:

Overall, I could have done better. A memorised speech does not overshadow superficial analysis; the thesis was not highly original. However, it did keep the presentation engaging. Knowing the flaws, I can now avoid them in the future.

The thesis of the presentation remained cloudy because it not highly original or sophisticated. Some of my classmates opted for complex theses; some focused on the correlation in the messages of their related texts and 1984. While this did allow for complexity, there were often no clear establishment of what the vague 'human experiences' were or how they were depicted, leaving some confusion for the audience. While my own thesis did address "how human experiences are depicted in texts", my analysis of 1984 was rather shallow; there was an opportunity to further explore the historical allusions in 1984. My presentation was hampered by a relatively weak thesis which could have been remedied by sending drafts. I was not willing to send something incomplete, eventually it was too late. I need to accept that there is nothing wrong in sending snippets.

The stronger aspect of the presentation was the ability to deliver the speech confidently—the ad lib of "I'm feeling fear standing before you" helped with establishing 'fear' as something collective. However, I did speak too fast—some dramatic pauses were just omitted in a panicked concern regarding time. I could have improvised some lines, showing more of my understanding. The good speeches from my classmates combined a comprehensible speaking pace with dynamic visuals such as GIFs, videos, and animation. This fulfilled the multimodal requirement while being engaging. The presentation would have been less clunky had there been a practice run with an assistant. While it did not entirely offset the weak thesis, the delivery created a presentation of high standards.

There were many opportunities to improve. My thesis was relatively weak and did not allow for the necessary depth for an "original" critical analysis of the two texts. I believe the presentation was of a high standard: I kept myself within the time limit while delivering a unique and strong presentation with confidence; however, its thesis could have been improved to not hold back the assignment.

And so, now I must end. Why? Because there's no time remaining.

RESULTS

In general, I can do better. No retrospective analysis was observed in the memoir. The thesis is not very original. However, there is this complexity. Knowing the flaws, you can avoid them in the future.

The flipchart is still cloudy because it is neither original nor complicated. Some classmates chose complex studies. Some focused on the relationship between each text and message in 1984. This increases complexity, but in most cases there is no clear basis for a child's "blurred experience". It is confusing to the audience what people are and how they are portrayed. My research addresses "how the human experience is expressed in the text", but the analysis in 1984 fit. 1984 is an opportunity to discover historical alliances. The presentation was interrupted by a relatively weak discussion that could be improved by presenting the draft. It's too late to be ready to send what's missing. You have to admit that sending the quote does not cause any problems.

An important feature of the presentation is that it can safely transmit speech. It is the task of the "fear of standing in front of you" before the ad helps create "fear" as a group. But I spoke very quickly - some impressive stops are anxiously drunk over time. Several lines can be developed for a better understanding. Classmates' amazing speeches combine smooth speech speed with animations such as GIF, video and animation. This attractive but fulfills many aspects. The presentation was not a hassle but an implementation session with my assistant. This is not a complete complement to weaknesses, but distribution has created a high standard of presentation.

There are many opportunities for improvement. My thesis is relatively weak and does not allow the depth required for critical analysis of the "original" of the two texts. I think the presentation is a high standard. Protect yourself within the time frame while giving presentations confidently and uniquely. However, you can develop the thesis in order not to continue the exercises. And now I have to finish.

Why not? Because time doesn't remarry.

The Journey Home

ORIGINAL

By Charles Thurmond

*Could I revive within me
Her symphony and song,
To such a deep delight 'twould win me,
That with music loud and long,
I would build that dome in air,
That sunny dome! Those caves of ice!*

- Samuel Coleridge

Four years of part-time training and all that young Lieutenant Gilmore's think about was the traditions. It dated back to when ships scoured the seas with engines fuelled by long-dead animals and plants billowing puffs of opaque, black smoke.

"I am ready to relieve you, sir." The two of them were of the same rank—tradition paid no attention to that.

"I am ready to be relieved," Lieutenant Ault replied. "I stand relieved." With a calculated step, Ault pressed a single digit on a red button. "Attention on the bridge, Lieutenant Gilmore has the deck."

"This is Lieutenant Gilmore, I have the deck."

"Now, I believe that's it," Ault muttered low. "Now that that's out of the way, welcome aboard the Turtle. I don't believe we've met," the older gentleman said, shaking hands with a firm grip. "Let me guess, you're a swabbie through and through, aren't ya?"

Gilmore smiled. "Does a swabbie mean something different here? Back home, it means someone born on a ship."

"And it means the same here," the older officer replied. "You were born in a ship like this, right? I can see it. You don't walk around like some aloof landlubber. You know where to go." Gilmore blushed, unsure as to how to respond. "Or am I just mistaken?"

“Well, sir, I can say that I have never been to Earth if that’s what you’re wondering,” Gilmore answered.

“When you’re on shore leave, you really must go,” the senior officer replied. “The trees there are real—so’s the air!” With a quick glance at his watch, the officer made his exit. “The ship’s yours, Lieutenant.”

Gilmore knew that humanity came from that giant ball of titular brown earth—his knowledge of the planet was weak. Apparently, Earth had forests where the water fell from invisible sprinklers high above. The oceans would swish and swash as if in a secret rhythm—something to do with the satellites, Gilmore recalled. All of this was achieved without human intervention, let alone electricity.

Gilmore had no clue how the planet looked from afar. The best he could conjure up was an orb featuring hundreds of glass domes on its skin, looking like blemishes and spots. That would be the patches of green—the blue was the canvas layered with sand and the green canopy of trees

It took a year before Gilmore was able to find time to make his pilgrimage home.

Bathed in sun cream, filled with antibiotics mingling about in his body and with a pair of sunglasses in hand, Gilmore was finally prepared to descend on the planet.

“Warning,” a feminine robotic voice cried out. “Please ensure that you have undergone Dystrophy Treatment. Gravity on Earth is 20% stronger than on Colony Ships.”

Gilmore had. Being a naval officer, he was effectively paid to keep himself strong.

Still, it was as though someone had climbed into his small little backpack when the elevator finally breached the atmosphere. He could see a nearby stick-like man nearly crumble as he felt Earth’s pull. While Gilmore chuckled to himself, his own black glasses fell from his head, splintering into many tiny shards on the metal floor.

Cursing to himself, Gilmore sought the aid of a nearby attendant who promptly called for the automated vacuums. It would take another minute before the elevator came to a stop. Being the only one lacking any eyewear. He was simply advised to “not look at the light.”

30 seconds in and Gilmore was idle. Smart Wristbands, Phones, Tablets—anything with a computer chip inside was to be kept off during the journey. The customs officer claimed that they interfered with the innards of the elevator.

From the transparent glass walls of the elevator, he could feel the searing heat—a jug of sun cream was not enough. The air conditioners could not compete with nearly unfiltered rays of light.

There was 10 seconds to go before he was at the port. He could see the tiled marble, white roof of the warehouse-like terminal below his feet. Reflecting off one of the panels was that shining ball of fire—it felt like a splash of scolding hot water on his face. Gilmore reeled in pain, shielding his eyes with his forearms. Immediately, the attendant activated the shutters, having avoided doing so earlier for the comfort of the other passengers.

While Gilmore's eyes had now recovered, he needed to be directed to a giftshop. The covered terminal had hundreds of shops from which Gilmore could easily have procured himself a new pair of sunglasses. Of course, they would be more expensive but they were a necessity.

He didn't get it.

They said that it would be beautiful—that it would be stunning. Some even went as far as to say it is natural human instinct to just stand in awe of Earth's beauty. Human eyes were meant for Earth—for the deserts, the oceans, the grass, the trees.

Gilmore found himself with nothing but strong apathy to the pool of blue softly swaying before him as he stood on the cliffside. The cold, harsh air thrashed at Gilmore. While the enormity of the oceans could be seen from the cliff, Gilmore was left thinking about the view he could get from 20 000 km in orbit. There, he would understand how insignificant he was: it was impossible to spot a city, let alone a town, from space. Instead, Gilmore wanted to see the coral of yellow lights from afar—at least that showed him that Earth is not just some land of dirt and water.

Six days on Earth and nothing had changed.

The cities on Earth looked like landed Colony Ships: there were pillars of steel and glass standing as if in a forest of metal. Gilmore seen that already. While the Colony Ships were dwarfed by the metropolises before him, the Colony Ships travelled in fleets that in turn dwarfed the cities. To visit somewhere new simply required a shuttle ride from the Colony Ships. In fact, the cities lacked the hidden tunnels from which veins of cables and ladders formed the walkways—Gilmore remembered the joy of using the secret walkways. There was no excitement in the cities.

The only bit of joy Gilmore felt was knowing that the days he spent on Earth were 'genuine'—they were based on the Sun and the Moon as it had been for millennia. While the Sun was still too bright, the Moon was acceptable to peer at. It was begging for him to explore it and its seemingly glowing skin of amber. He could visit that small pearl in the sky at any moment but this journey to Earth was confined to Earth: mankind did not originate from the Moon.

There was nothing to be found on Earth.

There was a reason why the ancient people believed that there were paradises waiting to be discovered. The idea of a perfect world is appetising particularly to those who yearned for an escape from their current dull, miserable lives. However, what is common between the paradises of Earth, be it Ancient Xanadu or Shangri-La, was that they were inaccessible to the common man. They were not fit to be on Earth, Gilmore thought—it was dirty and unclean. Paradises should be free from the constraints of the planet.

Above the stratosphere and you will freeze. On the ground, you will bear with earthquakes, the torrential weather and the trillions of deadly bacteria. How will you power everything? The planet is barely producing a surplus of energy as of now. How will you deal with that pestering Sun?

Earth was not paradise. It never was.

Despite the countless attempts by explorers to find famed Garden of Eden on Earth, Mars and even outside of the Solar System, no one could find it. No one could find the city of El Dorado and its sea of gold—it was not inside of Earth; it was not outside of Earth. It would be foolish to believe that the neighbouring planets could sustain human life, let alone house a secret world waiting for man to take their first steps again.

From outside the windows, Gilmore could see the shielded domes of green. The jungles there were tamed; the rain was not random and sporadic but was scheduled. The blue lights soothed the young man.

Paradise was not something to be found.

Floating freely and majestically without the forceful pull of gravity was a fleet of Colony Ships.

Inside each of the ships were entire ecosystems: food was farmed, the temperature was regulated, electricity was harvested from the stars. There was an abundance of comfort and warmth.

Paradise was something to be created.

Gilmore knew it very well: he was finally at home.

Four years of schooling and everything that Lee Gilmore knows is culture. From the day the animal was found dead, the ocean was cleared by a car washing black ice cream.

"...the ocean was cleared by a car washing black ice cream."

"I'm ready to comfort you" is also not a cultural point

"I'm ready to have fun," said Ault. "I am relieved." At this point, Ault pressed the red button. "Look at Lily Gilmore's bridge with gardens."

"It's Gilmore. I want to close the blanket."

"I believe in it now," Alto admitted. "Welcome to the road. We are still on the road. I don't think we will meet." The old man said with his hand. "Say you're a shag, you're ending, right?"

Gilmore smiled. "Wonderful. Is this something different? You're at home. Someone was born on this island.

The official said, "That's what it is." "You were born on such a boat, right? Look, you can't go anywhere. I know where to go. Gilmore is calm and doesn't know how to respond. Is it wrong?"

"If you think about it, I can tell you I haven't gone," Gilmore replied.

One senior official said, "You live in the country, you have to go." "Too much wood, so snow!" She quickly saw her watch and represented her. "This is your boat, Lee is here"

Gilmore knew that the man had come from the country he was visiting - his world was good - apparently there was a forest and the water was falling from the grass. Gilmore remembers the sea as a hidden lake. No cooperation or power is needed to complete it.

Gilmore is far from understanding what the world is like. He may be affected by glass guns, broken bottles such as stains and scratches. These conveyor belts are covered with green woody areas.

It has been a year since Gilmore found his religious home.

Moore washed, then filled with antibiotics, then poured into a glass and put into the ground.

The voice of the women's movement is "Governor." You have signs of dysfunction. The breast is about 20% stronger than the large intestine. "

Gilmore was there as a war ship. The value of becoming stronger.

However, when the frequency disappeared like a ring, it could drown the whole world and look for a man. During the operation, Gilmore threw his black key off his head and cut it into small pieces.

Gilmore was embarrassed and promptly asked the workers to fix the problem. The elevator took a minute to get up. He said he can't see the light just to spend money.

Within 30 seconds, Gilmore disappeared. Your smartphone, phone, slot and box with a computer screen on the move. The officer responded and crossed the border.

With a high glass, she can feel headaches and lack of sunlight. Light speed teams cannot compete.

Before we go to the harbor, there is a 10 second hue surrounded by a port with a box in front of a white building like a square. It is a flag that shows both the panel section and the hot water at the same time. Gilmore was injured and used his heart to protect his face. Shortly thereafter, he moved the window and prevented the first step.

Although Gilmore's eyes were still fresh, he had to refer to a music file. Gilmore has several stores in the cover cabinet that can customize it to a whole new range of carpets. Of course they can cost more but they are worth it.

but that did not happen.

They say it's a beautiful thing - it's really scary. Some have even gone as far as to declare that human nature is entirely based on the beauty of the earth. The human eye is the shape of the earth - rainforest, lakes, grass, trees.

Gilmour saw himself in front of him without thinking about a blue slave that he was standing next to. The cold weather reached the cold sea at Gilmore. While most oceans are visible from the reef, Gilmore is left to contemplate the landscape and can reach up to 20 000 km away. - Which was presented to him, at least not to land in dust and water.

One of the blue slaves

Six days on earth and nothing has changed.

Cities on Earth are similar to the ships of the colony: there are bronze and glass pillars that stand on the red carpet. Gilmore appears. Although the metropolis was blamed on the metropolis before the ships of the colony, the ships of the colony faced the hills that became the cities. Move to a new location requiring transportation by colonial ships. In fact, the city lacks the hidden features that four more young people have built on the streets - Gilmore enjoys using the quiet streets. There is no happiness in cities.

The only pleasure that Gilmore saw was that today's existence was 'real' - they were based on the sun and moon for centuries. Although the sun may be bright, friends on the moon agree. He asked her to look at him and his bright red hair. He could travel this little skin in the air at any time, but this journey of the Earth was related to the Earth.

There is nothing on earth.

There is a reason why the ancestors hope that the plots will be waiting to be revealed. The idea of a better world really appeals to those who want to escape their insecure lives. However, what the planets have in common is the ancient Zanadu or Shangri-La, which are beyond the reach of ordinary people. They are unfit to live on earth, Gilmore thought, filthy and filthy. Heaven needs rest from all corners of the world.

Over the stratosphere and you relax. Be patient in the web of earthquakes, floods and deadly disease. How do you live with everything? The world is turning into as much energy today. How will you catch that day?

Earth is not a body. no at all.

Despite numerous attempts by experts to find the famous garden of Eden on Earth, Mars and beyond, none have been successful. No one is able to see the city of El Dorado and its golden sea - it is not in the earth; It is not beyond the earth. It is absurd to assume that other continents cannot survive the material of human life, light and virtual worlds that await humans to restore their original creation.

From the glass windows Gilmore could see the green domes bright. There are crows; Spanish rains are unstable but organized. The blue light illuminated the youth.

Heaven is not necessary.

A unique and brilliant band without any gravitational vibe is a standard rock coal band.

Trains were moved to each state: hamster feeding, position adjusted, wires collected electricity. Comfort and warmth are great.

Heaven is a thing to do.

Gilmore is well known. He stayed at home.

Reflection Relating To The Journey Home

ORIGINAL

Overall, I am pleased with the final result. Since the task was completed on time, I believe I have chosen an appropriate approach for this story. After many drafts and failed ideas, the final story features the concept of a Reimagined World with good use of the stimulus as can be seen in the plot. On the other hand, the stimulus had little input into how the story was presented and its form.

At the beginning of this task, I knew that I would be composing a short story with the stimulus in mind. This was done because I knew that I could not write a poem which could be sustained over 1500 words. With prose, I was able to use an omniscient third-person narrator to provide the necessary exposition to explore a reimagined world. Poems require the clever use of language to remain succinct; prose provides more freedom for the writer. For this task, I have written 3 incomplete stories alongside the final story. Originally, I planned only on writing one but the ideas from the scrapped stories would make their way into this one. Retained from the previous attempts was the sci-fi setting along with a talk and an exploration into the concept of paradises. I have used my time effectively as the task was given on the due date, however I do believe that I did not dedicate enough time to the reflection which was completed much later than the actual task. This can be fixed by forcing myself to complete the draft in the similar manner I did the story: write most of it first and refine it as time goes by. This approach resulted in the cohesive final story that I would consider to be of high quality as it can still improve.

The stimulus provided was featured throughout the entire task with the domes in the air being shown prominently as a sign of paradise.

I did not expect to go into this task with one completed story and three incomplete ones with several drafts. However, this approach yielded the final product which I would consider to be high standard. On the other hand, there was difficulty regarding how the stimulus could be incorporated throughout the entirety of the story, which is an aspect that can still improved upon with this story. Ideas such as a realisation of what paradises were and a setting in the far future were retained for the final story as they both involved the reimagination of the current world along with a strong use of the stimulus. As a writer, Coleridge takes the historical figure of Kublai Khan for Kubla Khan and reimagines Ancient China as a beautiful land of “Enfolding sunny spots of green.” Imagery like the one mentioned allows the creation of a new world for the reader, allowing them to picture fictional objects; therefore, I also used similar imagery within my own work. I interpreted the vivid descriptions in the extract as a depiction of paradise, hence my allusions to the Garden of Eden (also known as Paradise) and other locations.

The stimulus provided was featured throughout the entire task with the domes in the air being shown prominently as a sign of paradise. The idea of a reimagined world requires involves taking a current concept and looking at in a different direction. This is what I believed Samuel Coleridge did when he composed Kubla Khan. I therefore interpreted the “dome in air” as being domes floating in the middle of space where that is possible. While Coleridge found beauty within the world around him, I believe that it is possible to find it within outer space. While I do establish a new world through the use of techniques such as simile, metaphor, and allusions, I believe that the world is quite lacking in depth as it is mostly a generic sci-fi universe where humanity has taken to space. There is no new technology that has been introduced that is not currently possible. On the other hand, the elective of Reimagined Worlds has been integrated better as I have taken the idea of paradise and transplanted it to outer space. I believe that since technology can remove most of the problems people face, paradise must be created by people for people where all issues are taken care of.

As a whole, the short creative piece of writing would be considered of high standards as it does reimagine the current world while establishing a world through literature. Because of the many drafts and revisions, the story is adequate and creative and benefitted from the form of short story. While improvements could have been made, I am happy with the final result for the story as it is the cumulation of many failed ideas.

RESULTS

Overall, I'm happy with the end result. The work was done on time, so you've probably chosen the right approach for this story. After several drafts and lost ideas, the final story introduces the concept of the world under investigation, taking advantage of the stimuli featured in the plot. On the other hand, excitement has little effect on how the story is presented and shaped.

Initially, I knew that I was going to write short stories to provoke them. This is because I knew I couldn't write more than 1,500 words. In prose, I was able to use a multi-sided third-party statement to provide the necessary explanation to explore the world under investigation. Simple language needs to be used to keep the poem simple. Prose gives writers more freedom. To do this, I wrote three incomplete stories along with the last. At first, I was going to write just one, but abandoned story ideas made their way to each other. The outline and dialogue of science fiction and the discovery of the concept of heaven have been preserved by previous efforts. When looking at the tasks in good time, I used my time effectively, but I feel that I did not spend enough time on reflections that ended much later than the actual work. This can be done by enforcing the draft in the way the story is written. Write down the first principles and improve them over time. It is likely that this approach will eventually lead to a final and better quality story.

The excitement presented during the dome and the passage of air, which is clearly seen as a sign of heaven.

We were not expected to think of three flawed stories, including a whole story and some drafts. However, this method produced the final product, which I know is high. On the other hand, it was difficult to see how the stimuli could be incorporated into the whole story. This is one aspect that can be further enhanced in this story. Ideas such as paradise creation and a distant future for the final story are preserved because they involve reusing the present world with powerful use of stimuli. As a writer, Coleridge sees Hubrai Khan's historical figures as Kubra Khan and defines ancient China as a beautiful country of "sunny green spots". Readers can create new worlds and depict imaginary objects using images such as the one above. Therefore, I have used similar images in my work. The vivid descriptions of this passage represent the heavens and the Garden of Eden (also known as paradise).

The excitement presented during the dome and the air pass, which is clearly visible as a sign of heaven. One idea of rethinking the world should take the current concept and look in another direction. This is what he believes Samuel Claridge did in the creation of Kuberakhan. So I explained the "dome in the sky" which is a temporary dome in the middle of space where possible. Coleridge has found beauty in the world around him, but believes he can find it in space. I created a new world using techniques like direct meta, comment and suggestion, but because of the sci-fi universe of science that humanity has taken into space, its depth seems to me to be too small, so absolutely New technology is also available, it is not possible. On the other hand, I took the idea of heaven and transferred it into space, so that the elite could be better integrated. I believe that a paradise should be created for people who struggle with all sorts of problems, because technology can eliminate most of the problems that people have to face.

Small creative works are generally considered to be of a high standard in their thinking of the world through literature as it is today. With many drafts and revisions, the story is relevant and creative and has a short look. There may be progress, but we are happy with the end result of the story because many failed ideas accumulate.

Economics Speech

ORIGINAL

Explain why an Australian Government may not be able to achieve all of its economic objectives. (READ: Explain the contradictory nature of the objectives.)

Any Australia Government would love to see strong, sustained economic growth and improving quality of life for Australians, this often comes with full employment but won't make prices unstable. The wealth would be evenly distributed. The CAD would be manageable, and the environment would be fine. Unfortunately, this utopian economy is simply not possible because they all clash. Let's see why.

Australian Federal Government wants:

1) Strong and sustainable economic growth:

- a) Conflicts with CAD – mention later
- b) Fiscal Policy: Let's say the economy is growing too fast. The government will likely take a contractionary stance. This should weaken economic growth as the government takes more in revenue than out in expenditure. Should a government run an expansionary budget stance—a smaller surplus or a bigger deficit—it can provide stimulus to the economy but can have repercussions as the government must source this debt (i.e. external stability and 'crowding out' effect) and it can cause inflation to rise because of the rise in aggregate demand—less taxation provides more disposable income for households. Fiscal Policy should be countercyclical to allow economic growth at downturns in the business cycle but can easily cause other issues.
- c) Monetary Policy: Monetary policy is managed by the Reserve Bank of Australia who determine the cash rate. Strong economic growth means inflation will likely fall out of targeted 2-3% inflation rate for a prolonged period—demand for goods and services increase faster than there is a supply. This means an increased cash rate which limits high economic growth. Because of the lag in the impact time of monetary policy, the RBA makes rate changes based on forecasts, meaning if inflation is too high, the RBA will curb some economic growth to prevent an increase in inflation from a rise in aggregate demand and/or wage inflation. Recently, the cash rate has been decreasing or remained constant, leaving the RBA with little room to cut the cash rate to stimulate economic growth.

- d) Labour Market Policy: Recent reforms such as the Fairwork Act 2009 has been aimed at increasing the efficiency of using resources, including labour. This means that more goods can be created from one unit of input (with average income going up as well—reflecting better quality of life). This makes Australia more competitive as an international trading partner, allowing more exports resulting in more economic growth. However, labour market policy can easily lead to increased structural unemployment and increased unequal distribution of income.

2) Low inflation:

- a) Inflation conflicts with unemployment because of the Lorenz Curve. Low unemployment means low supply of labour which should drive the price of labour or wages up, meaning high inflation. The converse is true.
- b) Fiscal Policy: since the budget reflects aggregate demand as a result of government intervention, if inflation is too high then the government might run a budget surplus with an increase in taxation to decrease aggregate demand to reduce inflation. This of course can result in weaker economic growth.
- c) Monetary Policy: The RBA's responsibility is managing Australia's inflation, keeping it between 2-3%. The cash rate or the interest rate for banks' access to money is managed by the RBA. An increased cash rate would weaken aggregate demand by encouraging saving and limiting investment. Because of this drop in economic activity, unemployment will likely go up. A decreased cash rate would increase demand and would bring inflation up but could stimulate the economy and recent in higher economic growth and employment. Australia has recently had low inflation, allowing the RBA to cut the cash rate and focus on its two other objectives.
- d) Labour Market Policy: Whereas the previous two were demand-related inflation, if unemployment falls below the Non-Acceleration Inflation Rate of Unemployment (NAIRU) which is somewhere between 3-5% then the low supply of labour will increase the price of labour or wages, easily causing wages to increase and lose value compared to the goods produced.

3) Low unemployment:

- a) As I said before, conflicts with low inflation
- b) Fiscal Policy: Aside from the government spending creating jobs in the public sector, budgets can stimulate the economy such as investments in infrastructure, etc. Additionally, if taxes are cut in an expansionary budget, the increased in aggregate demand because of the increased disposable income means firms will likely hire more people to match the increased demand.
- c) Monetary Policy: Similarly, if the RBA cuts the cash rate, accessing finance for investments will become easier. Additionally, people will not save as much because of the lower returns. This increase in aggregate demand leads to what was outlined prior.
- d) Labour Market Policy: Labour Market Reforms, to achieve long-term increases in productivity, can lead to short-term structural unemployment. Acts such as the minimum wage has set a price floor on wages, preventing unemployment from being too high while also leaving a surplus of labour. Low unemployment leads to high inflation.

4) External Stability:

- a) Fiscal Policy: Budget deficits can lead to the crowding out effect as the government finances their increased expenditure compared to revenue. They will turn to the private sector who buys government bonds—foreign buyers can do the same. This results in payments to service the debt leaving Australia and being recorded as debits on the primary income account. This also happens as domestic banks finance domestic projects by borrowing. However, if the budget is contractionary, it can decrease aggregate demand and prevent a larger debit on the Balance on Goods and Services from imports. This will bring strong economic growth but will likely increase the CAD.
- b) Monetary Policy: If the RBA increases the cash rate to tackle inflation, foreign investors will likely begin investing into Australia because of the higher interest rate. This will also likely appreciate the Australian Dollar. While this leads to investment into Australia with interest paid on it being debits on the Primary Income Account, the appreciation of the Australian dollar makes imports cheaper for Aussies and exports less competitive. This should decrease aggregate demand for Australia leading to less economic growth. Servicing debt overseas, however, should be cheaper because the A$ is worth more.
- c) Labour Market Policy: Reforms that make Australian firms and industries more efficient and productive will improve Australia's international competitiveness. While this means more exports, this can result in foreign investment into Australia. This can mean credits on the BOGS but also more debits on the Primary Income Account.

5) Sustainable use of environment:

- a) Contradicts economic growth which means use of all resources including environment.
- b) Fiscal Policy: Several Australian Governments have attempted to address issues surrounding the environment by using market-based policies such as the Carbon tax. These have been unpopular, especially among the parties, and have resulted in ended premierships. Taxes on environmentally detrimental goods can lead to less goods being produced alongside less demand. This achieves sustainable use of environment at the cost of political backing.
- c) Monetary Policy: Does not apply.
- d) Labour Market Policy: Labour Market Policy results in microeconomic reforms to achieve an efficient use of resources. Labour does not fall under land so yeah, it doesn't apply either.

6) Equal distribution of income

- a) Australia has an unequal distribution with the top 20% earning more than 40% of income
- b) Fiscal Policy: The automatic stabilisers can result in a more equal distribution of income. The progressive tax brackets ensures that those that are earning more pay more in tax which is then used to pay for social security for the unemployed

(social payments). Recently, the abolishment of a tax bracket has meant that Australia is tending to be more inequal. In times of economic growth, growth is limited as more is taken through tax and the now-employed pay income tax.

- c) Monetary Policy: If there is a rate cut and the economy improves, more people will get employed resulting in a more equitable distribution of income as the economy produces more.
- d) Labour Market Policy: Decentralisation of labour market policy means some industries have weaker representation and negotiating power. This can lead to some industries getting wage increases while others do not. This can further increase a gap and cause more inequal distribution of income.

If you're a government, good luck 'cos unless you live in paradise, you're not going to see all of these objectives met.

RESULTS

Explain why the Australian government was not able to achieve its economic goals. (Read: Work for yourself.)

The Australian Government supports sustainable development, fosters economic development and improves the living standards of Australian people. This process affects the entire organization, but it is not clear. She offers gifts. You can scan the LRC and delete the location. But utopian families cannot endure an entire war. Let's find out why.

The Australian government wants it

1) Strong and steady growth;

a) Ham reports

- b) Cash flow: As a result, cash flow is accelerating. The government must also stand. Governments need to prevent the growth of the economy because it is better than giving it to governments. If the government is known to have more or less money it could improve the policy, but it could have consequences because the government believes it is a source of debt. Increase the silence and hold the anger with the "IPP Sleeper" effect. As demand goes, so does tax revenue. Business policies need to prevent revenue growth, which can eliminate any problems that could cause the business to collapse.

- c) Financial position: Essentially, financial leaders guide the Reserve Bank of Australia with sound financial preparedness. Strong growth, which can lead to a fall, can be up to 2-3%. Equipment and services are installed quickly before release. This will boost real estate prices and stop the high growth. RBA predicts a change in the speed of production in the absence of the player's leadership. In other words, if the price is too high, the RBA will hold the level of growth and level of the economy. Prices have increased and / or prices have skyrocketed over the past few years, and revenue levels have not decreased or changed as a result of RBA prices and rising sales.

- d) Business Policies: Changes, such as the 2009 Trade Trade Act, are aimed at improving the use of resources, particularly jobs. This means that you can make many products at the source of income (high risk and high quality of life). This will allow Australia to be more competitive than its global trading partners, attracting customers and boosting revenue growth. Simple business policies can improve privacy and increase unemployment.

2) Low inflation:

- a) The Lorentz curve creates inflation. Reducing unemployment reduces labor, increases the value of labor or increases wages and hence inflation. Not really
- b) Monetary policy: The budget reflects the total demand due to government intervention, so if the inflation rate is too high, the government will enable the rising tax balance to reduce basic demand and reduce inflation. Clearly, this could lead to poor economic growth.
- c) Monetary policy: RIA monitors inflation and 2-5% in Australia. RBA Bank controls the availability of diamonds in terms of finances, cash taxes or interest rates. Increasing interest rates will improve savings and investment and reduce overall demand. Low economic indicators are expected to increase unemployment. Reducing cash rates will increase demand and inflation, but it will also stimulate the economy and accelerate recent economic growth and employment. Recently, Australia's inflation RBA has reduced its currency exchange rates and has focused on two more goals.
- d) Labor market policy: The last two levels of inflation are required, but if the unemployment rate is reduced from 3% to 5% of the NIRU, then labor reduction will be normal. Unlike tariffs, effort and compensation can easily increase wages and reduce costs

3) Low cost

- a) As I said before, the fight against racism is not trivial.
- b) Tax deductions: For example, the cost of business investment can be reduced compared to a social decline. Furthermore, taxes are increasing, taxes are decreasing and current taxes are falling, and many people want to support the project.
- c) Fall: On the other hand, if the bank loses assets, the borrowers are ready to borrow. Small businesses to save big money. The Malaysian army is another problem.
- d) Business Announcements: Changes in business practices reduce long-term growth and reduce short-term annuities. The market is slowly changing, production and demand are increasing. There is a high demand for high quality services.

4) External evaluation:

- a) After the monument was funded: I know what I mean. Father, mother, father, incredible-no longer father. Armenia did not acquire any legal property or license. Responsibility for business and hell. I came to a new city where I saw weapons and objects from my family. If you grow up, I will.

- b) Best time: I have time and I think Australia is ready. Talk about gasoline and hit. You always go up and down. Australia. You and Armenia are my top priorities and I want to be with my father so I can travel from home to my father, the United States and Armenia. No, not Armenia. I can tell you my money, thoughts, personality and rules.
 - c) Farmers, farmers, and the land I want. The king and I went to Armenia, but no one knows if I can see me. You have your home, your country, your marsh, your orders and rituals, and you live with your husband and your place.
- 5) Use of protected country:
- a) All resources, including the environment, are used against economic development.
 - b) Income tax Some Australian governments have tried to use market-based approaches, such as carbon, to address climate issues. He was very popular with political parties and forced the president to leave. Taxes on hazardous waste can reduce production and demand. It helps us to continue our environment with political support.
 - c) Money laundering rules: Not applicable.
 - d) The labor market is the market. Labor market policies have led to economic reforms to benefit more advanced companies. This project is not underground and will not be used.
- 6) Under entry
- a) Australia has many benefits - from 20% to 40%.
 - b) Best Practices: Running a successful or successful business can help you improve your financial situation. Employees pay high costs. This is due to the low cost of use. Discussing the tax policy should benefit interested people in Australia. During the trading period, taxes were reduced.
 - c) Financial situation: Most people spend money with money.
 - d) The expansion of the labor market has created the need for independence and strength in the economies of other countries.

You will never know if you are beautiful. If they do not know the outcome, you are in luck.

I Think I Saw Mexican Wrestler Putin

ORIGINAL

It was a terrible Summer day. The sun was shining, I was melting in the heat, and it was raining. It was fucking raining. Because of the wind from last week, the internet was still down and I was an idiot and didn't download anything. So, there I was with my eyes on the ceiling. I could see every single pore—every imperfection left there by an imperfect painter. I was wondering if I could do a better job.

That was when he came in—a man I can best describe as Mexican Wrestler Putin.

He grabbed me from my bed and threw me onto the ground with a loud thud.

I held up my arms to shield my face. “You—You got the wrong guy!”

Mexican Wrestler Putin froze. He helped me up.

“Sure, sure. Don't worry, mate.”

With that, he simply left.

When it dawned on me what had just happened, I ran to follow him but he was gone.

The pain was gone and there were no lasting injuries. There was no trace of him ever entering my room, let alone my house.

No one else has ever seen him. Google image searches yielded nothing.

This drove me to make an image.

If you have seen Mexican Wrestler Putin, please contact me immediately at:

John Gregg's Sad Moustache

ORIGINAL

Now get off mah lawn!

John Gregg once pulled a man from a car wreck near Marco, Indiana on Highway 67 and although the man lost his leg, the car was on fire, and Gregg's assistance on site was considered a possible life-saving action. A nurse traveling on the highway that Saturday then came to the Michigan man's assistance.

Good thing Gregg didn't lose his moust-gregg

All of the names in this passage is top-notch:

Gregg has been married three times. He is married to Lisa Kelly. The couple wed in 2012, after the November election, and live in Sandborn, Indiana. Gregg and his second wife, Sherry (née Biddinger) Gregg Gilmore, met while at law school at Indiana University and married two years later in 1989. They were married for 16 years, divorced in 2006, and have two sons, John Blackwood Gregg and Hunter Gregg. Their children were both adults when Gregg first ran for governor in 2012. Gregg's first marriage was to Kim (née Reichman) Kirkwood in 1978 and it lasted one year.

5 May 2020 House Sitting

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS

The SPEAKER: Just before we get to the next question, I draw to the attention of the House the presence of the former member for Parkes and Speaker of the House, the Honourable Harold McGillan. Also present is the past member for Oppach, Mrs Emily Perov. I bid you both a warm welcome back to the House.

Honourable members: Hear, hear!

QUESTIONS WITHOUT NOTICE

Mr FOWLER (Grimwerp): My question is to the Minister for Social Services. As our civil servants in AusAid demand better working conditions and a better pay rise, and as paramedics demand better compensation for workplace injuries, does the Minister think it is right to instead ignore them and pour money into already well-funded services?

Ms LOWE (Lybster—Minister for Social Services): I thank the shadow minister for his question but might I just say that he's being a bit coy with the information, Mr Speaker. What we have over the past year was a 2.2% increase in spending on the public services. What we have is a larger increase than the one seen under the Social Democrats during their last two years in government and it is up to the spin-doctors among those opposite which paint this as a bad thing!

Mr Speaker, funding has gone up. Funding has gone up and the honourable member opposite thinks this is unnecessary. He thinks this is unnecessary.

Mr Fowler interjecting—

Ms LOWE: Now he's shouting. Well, what I'll say to the honourable member is that the funding increase for the police has seen crime go down to new lows, Mr Speaker. New lows. New lows mentioned by the Prime Minister and the Attorney-General. New lows, Mr Speaker, a sharp decrease.

The reason this government is stepping up on funding of our public services are because of the state of the public services the members opposite left it in when we took government. When we were elected, we were elected because the people were fed up with long wait-times and talking to a robot. They deserved better and the member for Philips could not deliver!

The SPEAKER: The Minister will resume her seat. The Shadow Social Services Minister on a point of order.

Mr FOWLER: On a point of order: the question was clear. She's not being relevant. Does the minister think it is right for paramedics to be going on strike and civil servants in AusAid—

The SPEAKER: The Shadow Minister can resume his seat. I think he has adequately reminded the Minister of the question. Before I call the Minister, may I remind the Shadow Minister and all other members that points of order are not an opportunity for a member to repeat their question in a louder voice. The Minister for Social Services.

Ms LOWE: Thank you, Mr Speaker. Public spending has only increased under a Darling government. What this government will do to address the issues brought up by the members of our proud public service will be handled appropriately between myself and their departments.

That has been the standard course of resolving any issues faced by our civil servants and I'm pretty sure the member for Philips should be well aware of that when he was the Minister for Social Services.

Opposition members interjecting—

The SPEAKER: Order!

Ms LOWE: It's a double standard that those opposite love to keep. They will overlook the giant fault lines coming for them if it means they can score a cheap jab at us.

The SPEAKER: Members on my left. The Prime Minister.

Mr DARLING (Irons—Prime Minister): I ask that further questions be placed on the Notice Paper.

DOCUMENTS

Ms PARKER (Vinlet—Leader of the House): Documents are tabled in accordance with the list circulated to honourable members earlier today. Full details of the documents will be available in the Votes and Proceedings.

I have a question

Social Security Minister and Cabiler 1000 (GrimWarp)

Mslow, Minister of Culture: In addition to the Black Minister, he said he grew up. What we can do is increase public spending by 2.2% annually.

In the past, the Treasury has lost money in the usual way. do not mind

MARK FOWLER OPTIONS

Mrs. Law, my name is that I am a member of the Editorial Board and you say police make money. I heard that the next president wants criticism.

The reason is that we've heard the government helping civil servants. This place is still important because we provide a lot of food and how robots use our text. Philip members can't save!

Yes: Minister to upgrade his seat in the Ministry of Social Services by request

Mr. Fowler: Again: the question is clear. The deal does not reflect what the minister testified and the officials at Oz Aid are acting in fact.

Verbal: The Shadow Minister may be doing his job. I hope this one looks at the Minister who has read well. Before calling on the Minister, I will first explain to the ministers of the defense and the rest of the branch that the members cannot raise serious questions.

Attorney: Greetings Mr. The loss of the Darling government was greatly increased. The governments that work to solve the problems that our proud members have created between me and their work.

This is a common practice in dealing with issues affecting our public staff. Phillip needs to know if he has a finger.

6 March 2020 House Sitting

ORIGINAL

START OF BUSINESS

The DEPUTY SPEAKER (Jasmine Khalil) took the chair at 12:00, made an acknowledgement of country and implored all members to reflect.

BUSINESS

Ms NEWMAN (Aynor—Manager of Opposition Business): I move:

That notice No. 6, private members' business, be called upon immediately.

Question agreed to.

MOTIONS

CENSURE OF THE MEMBER FOR EARL, HENRY ALLEN

Consideration resumed of the motion:

That so much of the standing orders be suspended as would prevent the member for Aynor from moving the following motion immediately:

That the House censures the member for Earl, Henry Allen, for his horrendous statements in regards to the Blue Field shooting.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The question is that the motion as moved by the Manager of Opposition Business be agreed to. I call the Prime Minister.

Mr DARLING (Irons—Prime Minister): I thank the members opposite for their cooperation with this serious matter. The government intends on letting this pass and the actual motion itself put to a conscience vote. The government does not stand by the words said by the member for Earl and the member for Earl has said that.

His words have been hurtful, they have been offensive and this government believes that it is best that we remove the politics out of this and let individual members decide where they stand on this matter. More importantly, we need to give the member for Earl an opportunity to explain himself.

Mr McAllister: Oh, come on!

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The Prime Minister has the call.

Mr DARLING: We on this side of the chamber and I hope members on that side of the chamber stand for freedom of speech, Madam Deputy Speaker. It's one of the key tenets of this nation. I thank the Leader of the Opposition and the Manager of Opposition Business for their long discussion with me and the Leader of the House of this matter and we believe it is best if, after this motion is moved and seconded, this motion is referred for debate in the Debating Committee and not the main chamber.

Mr McAllister: Saving face again?

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The Prime Minister can pause for a second. I warn the Shadow Minister for Home Affairs. Shut it. The Prime Minister has the call.

Mr DARLING: Thank you, Madam Deputy Speaker. This is a serious matter and the member for Philips should know better, Madam Deputy Speaker.

Mr McAllister interjecting—

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The Shadow Home Affairs Minister is warned. The Prime Minister.

Mr DARLING: The Debating Committee is a much more appropriate chamber for this debate. We all have our views on what the member for Earl said but we also all our own views on what this House wants to do in response to his offensive words.

I will, however, say to people like the member for North Stanley and the Greens who are actively making this seem like the Progressive Conservatives are supporting the words of the member for Earl. That's a highly incorrect and dangerously erroneous claim made by people like the member for North Stanley who seek to use this serious case as political ammunition. It's wrong, Madam Deputy Speaker, and the member for North Stanley and all of his buddies outside and inside of this Parliament should feel ashamed of themselves. They should.

Unlike the member for North Stanley who has evidently made up his mind on this matter without even hearing what we had to say, the members of the Social Democrats are good enough to know that this is a matter of debate. This is not the moment to let your party be hijacked the Greens. We have the Greens condemning the fact that we are holding a conscience vote on this matter. The Greens think letting members decide where they stand is wrong. They honestly think that. They might say they stand for freedom of speech but when we see the amount of vitriol thrown about by them, it's a sad act.

I think it was Evelyn Beatrice Hall who said:

"I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

This right here is the belief will take with me coming into the debate. This is the belief other members in this chamber will take. It is a fair belief. It is a belief that demands fairness and this House, of all the places in this great country, should at least hear out the member for Earl and that's why this government will aid in the passage of this motion to suspend standing orders. It is the member for Earl's right to be heard at some point. There is no better time than on a Private Members' Day, Madam Deputy Speaker, hence why this government was happy to keep this order of business on the Notice Paper until today.

Ms Cohen interjecting—

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The member for Leigh! The member for Leigh will not speak until I've given her the call. The member for Leigh on a point of order.

Ms COHEN (Leigh): The Prime Minister is being irrelevant and also we should not platform racists. It's not hard to understand.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The Prime Minister has remained relevant to the motion. The Prime Minister has the call.

Mr DARLING: I know for a fact that the member for Earl's words were offensive. I know they have hurt many. They are not words representing the Progressive Conservatives. They're his words and they are only that.

Mr Liu interjecting—

Mr DARLING: Don't act like you're better.

Mr Liu interjecting—

Mr DARLING: There are many more inflammatory words we could all say, let it be known to the Social Democrats that they have had cases like this within their own ranks! It's well documented.

Mr Liu (Gisone): 90 percent are from your side, you know.

Mr DARLING: I'll take that interjection and I'll take it with a grain of salt. Here we have another member, one of the Social Democrats whose more cushy with the Greens conflating this issue with one of politics. It's almost comical, Madam Deputy Speaker.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: Can the Prime Minister pause for a second? The member for Gisone is warned. The Prime Minister.

Mr DARLING: I will say to the member for Gisone that he will have a hard time trying to get the Leader of the Opposition to stand by every single word ever uttered by the member for Gisone. He won't for the same reason we won't stand behind the words of the member for Earl, for the same reason we condemned them, because the extreme views of one member does not reflect that of an entire party dedicated to the improvement of this great nation and the happiness and contentment of Lesser Australians.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The time for this debate has concluded. The question now is that so much of standing orders be suspended as would prevent the member for Aynor from moving a motion.

Question agreed to.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: I call upon the Manager of Opposition Business to move her motion.

Ms NEWMAN (Aynor—Manager of Opposition Business): I move:

That the House censures the member for Earl, Henry Allen, for his horrendous statements in regards to the Blue Field shooting.

I would like to thank the Leader of the House and the Prime Minister for their assistance in fast-tracking this motion and I would like to begin, Madam Deputy Speaker, by saying what reprehensible words that the member for Earl said on an interview to Blue News.

I quote, Madam Deputy Speaker, simply because the words the member for Earl said cannot be repeated in this chamber and quite frankly, it shouldn't have been repeated anywhere! I quote the interview:

"This shooting highlights the need for us to close our borders."

Mere hours after the shooting, Madam Deputy Speaker. Just mere hours. There were families who were anxiously waiting to know whether their loved ones were among the casualties when the member for Earl said that. However, Madam Deputy Speaker, that's not the worst one!

Mr Liu (Gisone): It's not?

Ms NEWMAN: It's not, the member for Gisone, it's not! Madam Deputy Speaker, the members who will defend the member for Earl will say there's no racial connotations behind what he said. We all know that the member for Earl is smart enough to not spout out anything overt. I'll give him that.

Ms Poole interjecting—

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: Order!

Ms NEWMAN: When asked whether he stands by the words of his chief of staff—

Ms Poole (Martin): His former chief of staff.

Ms NEWMAN: His former chief of staff, I'm sorry, but he initially stood by it. He stood by it even after hearing it! He stood by it even after hearing it, Madam Deputy Speaker. When asked whether he stands by the words of his former chief of staff, he said, "Yes." No hesitation. We can all watch it again. He knew what his former chief of staff said, he knew his former chief of staff was a man like him. But do you know what made him flip-flop? It was the Prime Minister, Madam Deputy Speaker. The Prime Minister said it was bad and all of the sudden, the member for Earl suddenly started thinking it's bad! He doesn't genuinely believe that, Madam Deputy Speaker. He doesn't believe that.

This is what the former chief of staff, Mr Drew Hayden, said in the leaked text messages:

"He was probs a muslim"

Get me some soap because I feel like I want to get those words out of my mouth, Madam Deputy Speaker. The member for Earl didn't denounce it! He didn't ask for clarification! He didn't even force Mr Hayden to resign! It was the backlash, Madam Deputy Speaker. It was the backlash.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: Order! The Manager will resume her seat. The member for Martin on a point of order.

Ms POOLE (Martin): On a point of order. The Manager made an unparliamentary remark, Madam Deputy Speaker, when she said—

Ms Newman: I'm quoting your pal!

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The member for Martin has the call.

Ms POOLE: that the member for Earl does not genuinely believe that what his former chief of staff said was reprehensible and wrong. This is flat out wrong but is mainly an imputation and I ask that you have the member withdraw it.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: For the convenience of the House, I will call upon the Manager of Opposition Business to withdraw. The Manager of Opposition Business.

Ms NEWMAN: I will not withdraw and I will speak on a point of order, Madam Deputy Speaker.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The member on a point of order.

Ms NEWMAN: What I said was not unparliamentary. I can read it out again—

Ms Poole interjecting—

Ms NEWMAN: but what I said was an allegation. A probability. Madam Deputy Speaker, the Speaker himself has ruled that members can say words to that effect even if they are loaded.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: I disagree with the member and I know very well that the member and the Speaker will agree with me that it's better for the member to withdraw. I call on the member to withdraw.

Ms NEWMAN: I withdraw.

The DEPUTY SPEAKER: The Manager of Opposition Business in continuance.

Ms Newman then spoke for some time—

The ACTING DEPUTY SPEAKER (Mr Wu): The question is that the motion be agreed to. I call the Leader of the House—oh, is the motion seconded? The member for Picannia.

Mr MANETH (Picannia): I second the motion and reserve the right to speak.

The ACTING DEPUTY SPEAKER: The Leader of the House.

Ms PARKER (Vinlet—Leader of the House): I move:

That the debate be adjourned.

Question agreed to.

Debate adjourned.

Ms PARKER: I move:

That the motion concerning the censure of the member for Earl be referred to the Debating Committee.

Question agreed to.

Many guidelines for preventing legitimate business have recently been published:

Henry Allen's housing graph is being discussed with members for comment in the blue sky.

POSSIBLE QUESTIONS: This should be decided by the agency's search engine. I called the Prime Minister.

DARLING (Prime Minister): I thank my friends for their cooperation in this important matter. The government wants to ensure that and the nature of the elections. The council is dissatisfied with the Earl's statement and was notified by the Earl.

His comments are so disgusting that he is surprised and it is good for the government to return to politics and leave the private sector at the same level. Most importantly, give us the opportunity to give our points in real quantity.

H. Mac Alistair: Oh come on!

PREPARATION: PM's statement.

H. DEAR: We are on the other side of the office and I think members of the other side of freedom of speech, Mrs. Baasha Manch. This is one of the great words of people. I thank the head and chairman of the department for a lengthy discussion with me and this type of building management, and we thought it would be good to have a leg up after this move. Choose a commission, not a home page.

H. McAllister: Against the defense?

NOTE: The PM may take a few seconds. I remember the shadow of the Home Secretary. This is more of a challenge than a PM.

H. DEAR: Hello Mrs. Hope, sir. This is a difficult problem, and a member of this team can better teach the vice-president of Philip Madame.

Mr. McAllister Competition -

Prime Minister was not accepted by Secretary of the Interior

My light locker. By the way, there is no doubt that all commissioners are properly tested.

In other words, people are from North Stanley. We need a happy partner, a strong cause, a cause. Stanley North, the last president of the Stanley Congress, is working as a researcher to determine the detrimental effects of firearm manufacturing so that Stanley, Stanley, North Sea residents and the Senate win.

However, the Democratic Socialist Party and the Commission will not see this friendship given the Democratic Socialist Party. Use on the lawn. Election parties are such. Because it's time for competition. And for those who believe in family life, this can be solved with bad housing. I do not deny this opinion, but I agree that it has the properties of acid sulfate.

Indeed, Thomas Hall says:

"What do you mean if you don't agree? How can I avoid death with me?"

At the core of the government, this product helps you get the most out of 10 manufacturers. Is this government good enough for financial institutions to inspect today's newspaper Kam Beach, despite the good weather?

Miss NEWMAN (Einor - Overseas Sales Representative): I went to:

Earl Henry Allen was shot and killed for playing games in downtown Blue Valley.

I would like to thank the Prime Minister and the Prime Minister for the speed of this journey, I would like to start, Madam President, in a statement to the General Council in an interview with Blue News. A

Say, Vice President, because you can't repeat what Charles A told Team A, because he has to be raised everywhere. I also said:

The debate underlines the importance of closing our borders. "

Hours after the woman was shot, a woman officer arrived. It was only a few hours. There are some families who want to determine if their family is among those at the doctor's home. However, Madam Vice Chancellor is not good, she is the best!

M. Liu (Jason): No?

Miss NEWMAN: No, Gisone, no! The female prime minister, Earl's guard, will say nothing. We all know Earl is smart when it comes to anything. Give it to.

Ask a woman

Business: Call!

New Note: Ever wondered if they had a problem?

From Ms Foley (Martin): Staff.

Ms. NEWMAN: The magic first, please, but it's still there. At the hearing of! He turned down with his wife's wife. Asked if he was following the old officer's words, he said yes. Without waiting. We can look at them all at once. He understood what his new servant was saying and knew you had a staff member. The president said something was wrong, and one of Earl's friends immediately started thinking wrong. He thinks this is the president. He agreed.

Former chef Drew Hayden said in a speech here.

"He's a catch"

I'm writing a lesson because I want to get the words out of my mouth, Hope. Friend Count is welcome to speak! She asked for details! He confronted Mr. Hayden! A defect, says girlfriend Madame. Falling the collector.

BUSINESS: Call! The employee will maintain the position. An invitation to pick up Martin.

Miss POOLE (Martin): Same. The officer, along with a female envoy, said this

Miss NEWMAN: Hello!

DATE: Comrade Martin is calling

Miss POAL: Comrade Earle does not obey the words of the former boss, both famous and negative. This may not be easy to understand, but it is a great invitation and I encourage you to be a wife.

ACTION: To improve the home, I mentioned pushing an agent to continue running the business. The anti-dumping business.

Mrs NEWMAN: I will not speak or speak at the meeting, Madam.

Global Climate

I rise to speak to this motion and we do so proudly because climate change is a true threat to not just us, not just to our friends in the Pacific Ocean whose islands are losing land each day we speak, but are a threat to every nation on this planet. As an island nation, New Zealand is quite vulnerable to the rising sea levels as the polar ice caps melt. For any member wishing to point out that some ice caps have seen an increase in volume, we have an overall downward trend with cyclical ups and larger downs in the sizes of our polar ice caps. They are melting faster because of this increase in temperature and we would like to note that change is not easy. There will economic hardships in battling climate change. There will need to be structural change, there will need to be work done by governments and private businesses. Above all, it will be worth it. It will be worth it for the children and grandchildren because we shouldn't just put off this problem on them—Sweden. Greta [Surname] led a march against climate action; it is her future that is at risk by problems we can solve today. Twenty years down the road, there will be no need to question what we could have done because if we take up action now.

We even have our own Climate Change Minister. We just need the other countries to catch on and understand that we have a crisis that can only be solved by us.

Venezuela

Mr Secretary-General, my name is [Redacted] and I am speaking on behalf of New Zealand when we say we support this motion in its current form. We support wholeheartedly. What our friends across the pond such as Australia or the US do is their own business, but New Zealand will not pick a side because it is not our responsibility to look at who we should back. What is our responsibility to show concern for the Venezuelan suffering abhorrent treatment as each second pass by.

The Less-Than-True Story Of How Unlisted Thoughts Got Its Name

SOCIAL MEDIA REPRESENTATION

The SIR-PRESIDENT: Order! Order! It has come to the attention of the Sir-President that our secondary Twitter account has not yet been named. It is now the responsibility of the Council to select a name for this twitter account. A ballot will be held. I will now accept nominations. I call Councillor Amsby.

Sir AMSBY: I move:

That the Twitter account name, The Most Delicious Word Salad, be now added to the ballot paper.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: The question is that the motion be agreed to.

Question agreed to.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: I call Councillor Rockwell.

Mr ROCKWELL: I move:

That the Twitter account name, Jukebox of Madness, be now added to the ballot paper.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: The question is that the motion be agreed to.

Question agreed to.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: I call Councillor John-Anne-Smith.

Ms JOHN-ANNE-SMITH: I move:

That the Twitter account name, Blackhole of Nothingness & Blackhole of Emptiness, be now added to the ballot paper.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: The question is that the motion be agreed to. Councillor Arial on a point of order.

Mr ARIAL: On a point of order, Sir-President, I believe it is out of order for a member to add two suggestions to the ballot paper.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: There is no point of order. The question is that the motion be agreed to.

Question agreed to.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: I call Councillor Tahoma.

Ms TAHOMA: I move:

That the Twitter account name, Unreliable Source, be now added to the ballot paper.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: I call Councillor Palace.

Ms PALACE: I move:

That the Twitter account name, The Unlisted Thoughts, be now added to the ballot paper.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: The question is that the motion be agreed to.

Question agreed to.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: I call the Leader of the Council.

Mr FRANKLIN-GOTHIC (Leader of the Council): I move:

That the ballot be now put.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: The question is that the ballot be now put.

DIVISION: Ayes 27 (6 majority) Noes 21 Pairs 1

The Council divided.

(The Sir-President—Sir Leftner)

Question agreed to.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: The ballot will now be held. The bells will now be rung for four minutes, mainly so that the minions of the chamber can prepare the ballot papers.

The bells having been rung—

The SIR-PRESIDENT: The ballot papers will now be distributed. I invite councillors to select the name they best prefer. I do remind Councillor Cursive to not write his name on the ballot paper as it will spoil his vote.

A ballot having taken place—

The SIR-PRESIDENT: I ask the whips from each party and the Convener of the Crossbench to supervise the clerks counting the papers.

The ballot papers having been counted—

The SIR-PRESIDENT: The result of the ballot are as follows: Unlisted Thoughts, 21; Jukebox of Madness, 16; Unreliable Source, 4; The Most Delicious Word Salad, 4; Jim, 2; Blackhole of Emptiness, 1; Blackhole of Emptiness, 0.

I therefore declare the name of the Twitter account, Unlisted Thoughts.

I for one voted for Jim, however I congratulate Councillor Palace for putting forward her nomination. I call on Councillor Palace to bask in the glory of the Council in having won the ballot. Councillor Palace.

Ms PALACE: Mr Sir-President, I for one am not happy with the results of this ballot. Mr Sir-President, a simple majority passed this ballot. Not an absolute majority, Mr Sir-President. Mr Sir-President, a majority of Councillors did not vote for my suggestion. Why should we use the archaic and unproportional First-Past-The-Post compared to superior methods such as Single Transferable Vote. I have here a paper from—

The SIR-PRESIDENT: Order! Councillor Palace will resume her seat. I call the Leader of the Council.

Mr FRANKLIN-GOTHIC (Leader of the Council): I move:

That the business of the day be called upon.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: The question is that the business of the day be called upon. All in favour please say Aye.

Honourable Councillors: Aye!

The SIR-PRESIDENT: All oppose please say No. I think the Ayes have it. We need at least two voices calling for a division. Councillor Palace on a point of order.

Ms PALACE: Mr Sir-President, I would like my strong objection to this motion noted.

The SIR-PRESIDENT: You just have. I think the Ayes have it, the Ayes have it.

Action Against Illegal Use Of Firearms

ORIGINAL

The General Assembly—

- 1) Recognising the need for civilian firearms for the purposes of hunting, sport shooting and self-defence and that there is no need for civilians to possess high-capacity magazines, high quantity of ammunition or sound suppressors. Additionally, military-grade firearms should not be given to civilians without a legitimate reason,
- 2) Acknowledging that the gun laws of few countries are permissive, choosing to allow people, save for prohibited groups, to possess firearms, including but not limited to Austria, Chad, Nigeria, Pakistan, Switzerland, the United States of America and Zambia. The gun laws of most countries are restrictive, requiring those wanting to possess firearms to prove good character and provide ample reason to own a firearm,
- 3) Acknowledging that a culture of glorification of firearms and an association of firearms with masculinity can lead to increased gun violence,
- 4) Acknowledging with concern the number of legally obtained firearms being used for illegal purposes,
- 5) Noting that according to the UN Disarmament Affairs Chief, Izumi Nakamitsu, that approximately 250,000 people die each year to gun violence and that many more are injured,
- 6) Noting with concern that inadequate background checks and lacking weapon registration can lead to dangerous people possessing a firearm, including people with a history of domestic violence, substance abuse or addiction, mental illness or suicidal tendencies,
- 7) Calling on member states to address the issue of gun-related crime through adequate legislation and regulation; strict enforcement of existing laws; reducing poverty and crime and reducing unemployment and gang activity,
- 8) Welcomes the upcoming Review Conference on the United Nations Programme of Action on Small Arms and Light Weapons.

RESULTS

Set—

- 1) Hunting sees launches, launches and self defenses such as high quality gifts, newspapers and gun tracking news. Civilians do not need many weapons or vehicles. It is given to civilians for no reason and should not be a military weapon.
- 2) In some countries, total techniques have been passed, and debates in Switzerland, Nigeria, Pakistan and Switzerland help people in the United States work. And in Zambia, there are strict laws in most countries, with the exception of a group of companies that provide people with guns in most countries and many reasons to buy guns.
- 3) In the gun culture, the gun market continues to grow.
- 4) Afraid of the number of legally licensed firearms
- 5) According to KB, the government estimates that 250,000 people are injured each year because of disarmament.
- 6) There is a concern that mental illness or death may be aware of seizures and total owners due to drug or substance registration.
- 7) Use relevant laws and regulations to fight crime, enforce existing laws, and encourage members to reduce risk and crime. And reduce unemployment and religious activity
- 8) Welcome to the US Conference on Weapons and Planning Services.

Note from the editor: Somehow, Google Translate has flipped the agenda of the motion and is also apparently against unemployment AND religious activity. Does this motion reflect the views of us? NO.

The Black Cat* (1845) by Edgar Allan Poe

ORIGINAL

By Edgar Allan Poe

FOR the most wild, yet most homely narrative which I am about to pen, I neither expect nor solicit belief. Mad indeed would I be to expect it, in a case where my very senses reject their own evidence. Yet, mad am I not—and very surely do I not dream. But to-morrow I die, and to-day I would unburthen my soul. My immediate purpose is to place before the world, plainly, succinctly, and without comment, a series of mere household events. In their consequences, these events have terrified—have tortured—have destroyed me. Yet I will not attempt to expound them. To me, they have presented little but Horror—to many they will seem less terrible than barroques. Hereafter, perhaps, some intellect may be found which will reduce my phantasm to the commonplace—some intellect more calm, more logical, and far less excitable than my own, which will perceive, in the circumstances I detail with awe, nothing more than an ordinary succession of very natural causes and effects.

From my infancy I was noted for the docility and humanity of my disposition. My tenderness of heart was even so conspicuous as to make me the jest of my companions. I was especially fond of animals, and was indulged by my parents with a great variety of pets. With these I spent most of my time, and never was so happy as when feeding and caressing them. This peculiarity of character grew with my growth, and, in my manhood, I derived from it one of my principal sources of pleasure. To those who have cherished an affection for a faithful and sagacious dog, I need hardly be at the trouble of explaining the nature or the intensity of the gratification thus derivable. There is something in the unselfish and self-sacrificing love of a brute, which goes directly to the heart of him who has had frequent occasion to test the paltry friendship and gossamer fidelity of mere Man.

I married early, and was happy to find in my wife a disposition not uncongenial with my own. Observing my partiality for domestic pets, she lost no opportunity of procuring those of the most agreeable kind. We had birds, gold-fish, a fine dog, rabbits, a small monkey, and a cat.

This latter was a remarkably large and beautiful animal, entirely black, and sagacious to an astonishing degree. In speaking of his intelligence, my wife, who at heart was not a little tainted with superstition, made frequent allusion to the ancient popular notion, which regarded all black cats as witches in disguise. Not that she was ever serious upon this point—and I mention the matter at all for no better reason than that it happens, just now, to be remembered.

Pluto—this was the cat's name—was my favorite pet and playmate. I alone fed him, and he attended me wherever I went about the house. It was even with difficulty that I could prevent him from following me through the streets.

Our friendship lasted, in this manner, for several years, during which my general temperament and character—through the instrumentality of the Fiend Intemperance—had (I blush to confess it) experienced a radical alteration for the worse. I grew, day by day, more moody, more irritable, more regardless of the feelings of others. I suffered myself to use intemperate language to my wife. At length, I even offered her personal violence. My pets, of course, were made to feel the change in my disposition. I not only neglected, but ill-used them. For Pluto, however, I still retained sufficient regard to restrain me from maltreating him, as I made no scruple of maltreating the rabbits, the monkey, or even the dog, when by accident, or through affection, they came in my way. But my disease grew upon me—for what disease is like Alcohol!—and at length even Pluto, who was now becoming old, and consequently somewhat peevish—even Pluto began to experience the effects of my ill temper.

One night, returning home, much intoxicated, from one of my haunts about town, I fancied that the cat avoided my presence. I seized him; when, in his fright at my violence, he inflicted a slight wound upon my hand with his teeth. The fury of a demon instantly possessed me. I knew myself no longer. My original soul seemed, at once, to take its flight from my body; and a more than fiendish malevolence, gin-nurtured, thrilled every fibre of my frame. I took from my waistcoat-pocket a pen-knife, opened it, grasped the poor beast by the throat, and deliberately cut one of its eyes from the socket! I blush, I burn, I shudder, while I pen the damnable atrocity.

When reason returned with the morning—when I had slept off the fumes of the night's debauch—I experienced a sentiment half of horror, half of remorse, for the crime of which I had been guilty; but it was, at best, a feeble and equivocal feeling, and the soul remained untouched. I again plunged into excess, and soon drowned in wine all memory of the deed.

In the meantime the cat slowly recovered. The socket of the lost eye presented, it is true, a frightful appearance, but he no longer appeared to suffer any pain. He went about the house as usual, but, as might be expected, fled in extreme terror at my approach. I had so much of my old heart left, as to be at first grieved by this evident dislike on the part of a creature which had once so loved me. But this feeling soon gave place to irritation. And then came, as if to my final and irrevocable overthrow, the spirit of PERVERSENESS. Of this spirit philosophy takes no account. Yet I am not more sure that my soul lives, than I am that perverseness is one of the primitive impulses of the human heart—one of the indivisible primary faculties, or sentiments, which give direction to the character of Man. Who has not, a hundred times, found himself committing a vile or a silly action, for no other reason than because he knows he should not? Have we not a perpetual inclination, in the teeth of our best judgment, to violate that which is Law, merely because we understand it to be such? This spirit of perverseness, I say, came to my final overthrow. It was this unfathomable longing of the soul to vex itself—to offer violence to its own nature—to do wrong for the wrong's sake only—that urged me to continue and finally to consummate the injury I had inflicted upon the unoffending brute. One morning, in cool blood, I slipped a noose about its neck and hung it to the limb of a tree;—hung it with the tears streaming from my eyes, and with the bitterest remorse at my heart;—hung it because I knew that it had loved me, and because I felt it had given me no reason of offence;—hung it because I knew that in so doing I was committing a sin—a deadly sin that would so jeopardize my immortal soul as to place it—if such a thing were possible—even beyond the reach of the infinite mercy of the Most Merciful and Most Terrible God.

On the night of the day on which this cruel deed was done, I was aroused from sleep by the cry of fire. The curtains of my bed were in flames. The whole house was blazing. It was with great difficulty that my wife, a servant, and myself, made our escape from the conflagration. The destruction was complete. My entire worldly wealth was swallowed up, and I resigned myself thenceforward to despair.

I am above the weakness of seeking to establish a sequence of cause and effect, between the disaster and the atrocity. But I am detailing a chain of facts—and wish not to leave even a possible link imperfect. On the day succeeding the fire, I visited the ruins. The walls, with one exception, had fallen in. This exception was found in a compartment wall, not very thick, which stood about the middle of the house, and against which had rested the head of my bed. The plastering had here, in great measure, resisted the action of the fire—a fact which I attributed to its having been recently spread. About this wall a dense crowd were collected, and many persons seemed to be examining a particular portion of it with very minute and eager attention. The words "strange!" "singular!" and other similar expressions, excited my curiosity. I approached and saw, as if graven in bas relief upon the white surface, the figure of a gigantic cat. The impression was given with an accuracy truly marvellous. There was a rope about the animal's neck.

When I first beheld this apparition—for I could scarcely regard it as less—my wonder and my terror were extreme. But at length reflection came to my aid. The cat, I remembered, had been hung in a garden adjacent to the house. Upon the alarm of fire, this garden had been immediately filled by the crowd—by some one of whom the animal must have been cut from the tree and thrown, through an open window, into my chamber. This had probably been done with the view of arousing me from sleep. The falling of other walls had compressed the victim of my cruelty into the substance of the freshly-spread plaster; the lime of which, with the flames, and the ammonia from the carcass, had then accomplished the portraiture as I saw it.

Although I thus readily accounted to my reason, if not altogether to my conscience, for the startling fact just detailed, it did not the less fail to make a deep impression upon my fancy. For months I could not rid myself of the phantasm of the cat; and, during this period, there came back into my spirit a half-sentiment that seemed, but was not, remorse. I went so far as to regret the loss of the animal, and to look about me, among the vile haunts which I now habitually frequented, for another pet of the same species, and of somewhat similar appearance, with which to supply its place.

One night as I sat, half stupified, in a den of more than infamy, my attention was suddenly drawn to some black object, reposing upon the head of one of the immense hogsheads of Gin, or of Rum, which constituted the chief furniture of the apartment. I had been looking steadily at the top of this hogshead for some minutes, and what now caused me surprise was the fact that I had not sooner perceived the object thereupon. I approached it, and touched it with my hand. It was a black cat—a very large one—fully as large as Pluto, and closely resembling him in every respect but one. Pluto had not a white hair upon any portion of his body; but this cat had a large, although indefinite splotch of white, covering nearly the whole region of the breast.

Upon my touching him, he immediately arose, purred loudly, rubbed against my hand, and appeared delighted with my notice. This, then, was the very creature of which I was in search. I at once offered to purchase it of the landlord; but this person made no claim to it—knew nothing of it—had never seen it before.

I continued my caresses, and, when I prepared to go home, the animal evinced a disposition to accompany me. I permitted it to do so; occasionally stooping and patting it as I proceeded. When it reached the house it domesticated itself at once, and became immediately a great favorite with my wife.

For my own part, I soon found a dislike to it arising within me. This was just the reverse of what I had anticipated; but—I know not how or why it was—its evident fondness for myself rather disgusted and annoyed. By slow degrees, these feelings of disgust and annoyance rose into the bitterness of hatred. I avoided the creature; a certain sense of shame, and the remembrance of my former deed of cruelty, preventing me from physically abusing it. I did not, for some weeks, strike, or otherwise violently ill use it; but gradually—very gradually—I came to look upon it with unutterable loathing, and to flee silently from its odious presence, as from the breath of a pestilence.

What added, no doubt, to my hatred of the beast, was the discovery, on the morning after I brought it home, that, like Pluto, it also had been deprived of one of its eyes. This circumstance, however, only endeared it to my wife, who, as I have already said, possessed, in a high degree, that humanity of feeling which had once been my distinguishing trait, and the source of many of my simplest and purest pleasures.

With my aversion to this cat, however, its partiality for myself seemed to increase. It followed my footsteps with a pertinacity which it would be difficult to make the reader comprehend. Whenever I sat, it would crouch beneath my chair, or spring upon my knees, covering me with its loathsome caresses. If I arose to walk it would get between my feet and thus nearly throw me down, or, fastening its long and sharp claws in my dress, clamber, in this manner, to my breast. At such times, although I longed to destroy it with a blow, I was yet withheld from so doing, partly by a memory of my former crime, but chiefly—let me confess it at once—by absolute dread of the beast.

This dread was not exactly a dread of physical evil—and yet I should be at a loss how otherwise to define it. I am almost ashamed to own—yes, even in this felon's cell, I am almost ashamed to own—that the terror and horror with which the animal inspired me, had been heightened by one of the merest chimæras it would be possible to conceive. My wife had called my attention, more than once, to the character of the mark of white hair, of which I have spoken, and which constituted the sole visible difference between the strange beast and the one I had destroyed. The reader will remember that this mark, although large, had been originally very indefinite; but, by slow degrees—degrees nearly imperceptible, and which for a long time my Reason struggled to reject as fanciful—it had, at length, assumed a rigorous distinctness of outline. It was now the representation of an object that I shudder to name—and for this, above all, I loathed, and dreaded, and would have rid myself of the monster had I dared—it was now, I say, the image of a hideous—of a ghastly thing—of the GALLOWS !—oh, mournful and terrible engine of Horror and of Crime—of Agony and of Death !

And now was I indeed wretched beyond the wretchedness of mere Humanity. And a brute beast—whose fellow I had contemptuously destroyed—a brute beast to work out for me—for me a man, fashioned in the image of the High God—so much of insufferable wo! Alas! neither by day nor by night knew I the blessing of Rest any more! During the former the creature left me no moment alone; and, in the latter, I started, hourly, from dreams of unutterable fear, to find the hot breath of the thing upon my face, and its vast weight—an incarnate Night-Mare that I had no power to shake off—incumbent eternally upon my heart !

Beneath the pressure of torments such as these, the feeble remnant of the good within me succumbed. Evil thoughts became my sole intimates—the darkest and most evil of thoughts. The moodiness of my usual temper increased to hatred of all things and of all mankind; while, from the sudden, frequent, and ungovernable outbursts of a fury to which I now blindly abandoned myself, my uncomplaining wife, alas! was the most usual and the most patient of sufferers.

One day she accompanied me, upon some household errand, into the cellar of the old building which our poverty compelled us to inhabit. The cat followed me down the steep stairs, and, nearly throwing me headlong, exasperated me to madness. Uplifting an axe, and forgetting, in my wrath, the childish dread which had hitherto stayed my hand, I aimed a blow at the animal which, of course, would have proved instantly fatal had it descended as I wished. But this blow was arrested by the hand of my wife. Goaded, by the interference, into a rage more than demoniacal, I withdrew my arm from her grasp and buried the axe in her brain. She fell dead upon the spot, without a groan.

This hideous murder accomplished, I set myself forthwith, and with entire deliberation, to the task of concealing the body. I knew that I could not remove it from the house, either by day or by night, without the risk of being observed by the neighbors. Many projects entered my mind. At one period I thought of cutting the corpse into minute fragments, and destroying them by fire. At another, I resolved to dig a grave for it in the floor of the cellar. Again, I deliberated about casting it in the well in the yard—about packing it in a box, as if merchandize, with the usual arrangements, and so getting a porter to take it from the house. Finally I hit upon what I considered a far better expedient than either of these. I determined to wall it up in the cellar—as the monks of the middle ages are recorded to have walled up their victims.

For a purpose such as this the cellar was well adapted. Its walls were loosely constructed, and had lately been plastered throughout with a rough plaster, which the dampness of the atmosphere had prevented from hardening. Moreover, in one of the walls was a projection, caused by a false chimney, or fireplace, that had been filled up, and made to resemble the rest of the cellar. I made no doubt that I could readily displace the bricks at this point, insert the corpse, and wall the whole up as before, so that no eye could detect any thing suspicious.

And in this calculation I was not deceived. By means of a crow-bar I easily dislodged the bricks, and, having carefully deposited the body against the inner wall, I propped it in that position, while, with little trouble, I re-laid the whole structure as it originally stood. Having procured mortar, sand, and hair, with every possible precaution, I prepared a plaster which could not be distinguished from the old, and with this I very carefully went over the new brick-work. When I had finished, I felt satisfied that all was right. The wall did not present the slightest appearance of having been disturbed. The rubbish on the floor was picked up with the minutest care. I looked around triumphantly, and said to myself—"Here at least, then, my labor has not been in vain."

My next step was to look for the beast which had been the cause of so much wretchedness; for I had, at length, firmly resolved to put it to death. Had I been able to meet with it, at the moment, there could have been no doubt of its fate; but it appeared that the crafty animal had been alarmed at the violence of my previous anger, and forebore to present itself in my present mood. It is impossible to describe, or to imagine, the deep, the blissful sense of relief which the absence of the detested creature occasioned in my bosom. It did not make its appearance during the night—and thus for one night at least, since its introduction into the house, I soundly and tranquilly slept; aye, slept even with the burden of murder upon my soul!

The second and the third day passed, and still my tormentor came not. Once again I breathed as a freeman. The monster, in terror, had fled the premises forever! I should behold it no more! My happiness was supreme! The guilt of my dark deed disturbed me but little. Some few inquiries had been made, but these had been readily answered. Even a search had been instituted—but of course nothing was to be discovered. I looked upon my future felicity as secured.

Upon the fourth day of the assassination, a party of the police came, very unexpectedly, into the house, and proceeded again to make rigorous investigation of the premises. Secure, however, in the inscrutability of my place of concealment, I felt no embarrassment whatever. The officers bade me accompany them in their search. They left no nook or corner unexplored. At length, for the third or fourth time, they descended into the cellar. I quivered not in a muscle. My heart beat calmly as that of one who slumbers in innocence. I walked the cellar from end to end. I folded my arms upon my bosom, and roamed easily to and fro. The police were thoroughly satisfied and prepared to depart. The glee at my heart was too strong to be restrained. I burned to say if but one word, by way of triumph, and to render doubly sure their assurance of my guiltlessness.

"Gentlemen," I said at last, as the party ascended the steps, "I delight to have allayed your suspicions. I wish you all health, and a little more courtesy. By the bye, gentlemen, this—this is a very well constructed house." (In the rabid desire to say something easily, I scarcely knew what I uttered at all.)—"I may say an excellently well constructed house. These walls—are you going, gentlemen?—these walls are solidly put together;" and here, through the mere phrenzy of bravado, I rapped heavily, with a cane which I held in my hand, upon that very portion of the brick-work behind which stood the corpse of the wife of my bosom.

But may God shield and deliver me from the fangs of the Arch-Fiend ! No sooner had the reverberation of my blows sunk into silence, than I was answered by a voice from within the tomb!—by a cry, at first muffled and broken, like the sobbing of a child, and then quickly swelling into one long, loud, and continuous scream, utterly anomalous and inhuman—a howl—a wailing shriek, half of horror and half of triumph, such as might have arisen only out of hell, conjointly from the throats of the dammed in their agony and of the demons that exult in the damnation.

Of my own thoughts it is folly to speak. Swooning, I staggered to the opposite wall. For one instant the party upon the stairs remained motionless, through extremity of terror and of awe. In the next, a dozen stout arms were toiling at the wall. It fell bodily. The corpse, already greatly decayed and clotted with gore, stood erect before the eyes of the spectators. Upon its head, with red extended mouth and solitary eye of fire, sat the hideous beast whose craft had seduced me into murder, and whose informing voice had consigned me to the hangman. I had walled the monster up within the tomb!

No Confidence Motion Against The Prime Minister

ORIGINAL

Mr SHORTEN (Maribyrnong—Leader of the Opposition) (14:09): I seek leave to move the following motion:

That this House has no confidence in the Prime Minister.

Leave not granted.

Mr SHORTEN: I move:

That so much of standing orders be suspended as would prevent the Member for Maribyrnong from moving this motion forthwith:

That this House has no confidence in the Prime Minister.

Today Australia has a Prime Minister in name only—a Prime Minister without power and a Prime Minister without policies. This is an appalling outcome for the nation. Unbelievably—after yesterday, when we saw how divided the government were—they are more divided today than they were yesterday. The conduct of this narcissistic government is both shocking and selfish, and undervalues the Australian people. This House should vote for no confidence because the Prime Minister has no authority, no power and no policies. The reason for that sits behind him. If nearly half of his own government do not want him to be the Prime Minister of Australia, why should the rest of Australia have to put up with him?

The case for no confidence in the Prime Minister has five points to it. First, if the Prime Minister's own party does not want him—and today nearly half of his party voted against him remaining Prime Minister—why should the parliament put up with him? The second reason, of course, as we saw yesterday, is the dismal paralysis on policies to lower energy prices and to tackle climate change. They cannot pass the parliament because this Prime Minister does not have the confidence of all of his backbench. Thirdly, this Prime Minister has never seen a fight for his principles that he hasn't squibbed and he has notoriously poor judgement, which his backbench and frontbench are willing to tell any journalist, anonymously, at any time. Fourthly—and even more importantly than the first three reasons—this Prime Minister and his government are ignoring the real challenges of the Australian people, and it means we can have no confidence in him. Finally, the reason why this parliament should have no confidence in the Prime Minister is there are divisions at the heart of this government which cannot be papered over by simply changing the salesman for this government.

Turning to the first case for why we should have no confidence in the Prime Minister, we saw remarkable scenes today. Yesterday the former Minister for Home Affairs said he supported the Prime Minister—until today. But, more than just his challenge to the Prime Minister, there is the fact that another 34 of his colleagues, within 24 hours of the Prime Minister spilling his own position, wanted him gone. This government has lost the will to live. Indeed, what is more significant is that some of the people who voted against the Prime Minister still sit in the executive of this parliament.

Opposition members interjecting—

The SPEAKER: Members on my left! The Leader of the House, on a point of order.

Mr PYNE (Sturt—Leader of the House and Minister for Defence Industry): Mr Speaker, on reflection, the government will take the debate with relish.

Honourable members interjecting—

The SPEAKER: Members on both sides! To the Leader of the Opposition, I need you to start back at the very beginning so that leave can be granted.

Mr SHORTEN: by leave—I move:

That this House has no confidence in the Prime Minister.

Today it is clear that we have a Prime Minister in name only. He is a Prime Minister without power. He is a Prime Minister without policies. He scraped home at the last election with no authority and no agenda, only the ability to respond to events. Today we have seen an appalling outcome for the nation. It is unbelievable that, even though the Prime Minister said yesterday that he could not take any action on energy prices because any single member of the government could veto it, today they've highlighted that they are even more divided. This is a government whose conduct is selfish and shocking. It is a narcissistic government consumed by its own jobs and its own struggles, and it's forgotten the people of Australia.

The case for no confidence in this Prime Minister can be made through five arguments. The first is: if the Prime Minister's own party doesn't want him, why on earth should the parliament put up with him? Second, we have dismal paralysis on the energy crisis which is affecting Australia, driving up prices and carbon pollution, and no government can retain the confidence of this parliament if they tell us they can't even advance legislation to drive energy prices down. The third proposition for why we should have no confidence in this Prime Minister is that the hallmark of his prime ministership is that, whenever his beliefs meet the opposition of his backbench, he surrenders his belief. This parliament should not put up with a Prime Minister only interested in surviving in his own job. He stands for nothing and fights for nothing except his own job. His notorious poor judgement is a hallmark which any government backbencher is happy to tell you about at length anonymously.

But, more important than the first three reasons, there is the fourth. Australians have got real issues, and this government is not addressing them. No amount of valedictory speeches from the Prime Minister can correct that wrong. Finally, the reason we should have no confidence in this Prime Minister is that your government is hopelessly divided, and it isn't even just about you anymore, Prime Minister. The Liberal government in this country cannot agree with each other on fundamental issues, and a divided government cannot run this country.

Turning to the first proposition—why we should have no confidence in the Prime Minister—if the Prime Minister has nearly half of his MPs wanting to change the Prime Minister today, how on earth should all of us have confidence in him? When you add together the 35 dissidents—soon to be a majority, I suspect—the 69 Labor MPs and possibly the crossbenchers, a clear majority of Australia does not want this Prime Minister to be the Prime Minister. We have no confidence in him.

I notice that, before question time, the member for Dickson—who at least had the integrity to go to the backbench because he couldn't support the Prime Minister on the frontbench—did his job interview. But what was telling—and why we should have no confidence in this Prime Minister—was that he was asked five times if he was going to challenge again and he had all the good reasons in the world not to answer that question. So I say to Australians who are shocked by the turmoil in this government: the turmoil is not over until the member for Dickson has the scalp of the Prime Minister hanging from his belt.

What is also telling is that, for the 35 MPs who voted to change the Prime Minister, some of them sit on the frontbench. We had the Minister for Health desperate to replace the Minister for Foreign Affairs until he discovered that the numbers weren't there. Obviously, he's a lot tougher when it comes to swearing at grandmas than when it comes to challenging the foreign minister. We've got the member for Deakin, the campaign manager for the member for Dickson, sitting quietly there as an assistant minister. Your best days are ahead of you, Member for Deakin.

But you can only conclude by the cowardice of frontbench rebels against the Prime Minister that the Prime Minister's weakness is infectious. At least those who voted against the Prime Minister should have had the courage to say, 'We'll undermine the government from the backbench not from the frontbench of this government'.

I said there was a second reason why we have no confidence in this Prime Minister. The handling of the energy policy by this government alone is reason enough for this House to have no confidence. They've proposed that we should have, initially, an emissions intensity scheme. We know that the current Prime Minister had a view on that, and we said we were willing to talk about that. But, as soon as we came to the dance, the Prime Minister was dragged away by the right wing of his party. Then the Prime Minister rolled out the poor old clean energy target and the Chief Scientist to advocate it. That didn't last very long. Labor is prepared to be bipartisan. What we discovered is that, when it comes to energy policy, when the Prime Minister refers to 'bipartisanship', he means getting the two warring wings of his own party to agree.

Then, of course, we had the much-unloved National Energy Guarantee—NEG 1.0, NEG 2.0, NEG 3.0. This is a government whose energy policy is guided by the never-ending panic of a Prime Minister. The reason we have no confidence in the Prime Minister is that, if he's too weak to legislate policy, if he's too weak to fight for what he believes in, how on earth will we ever lower energy prices in this country? I do not accept that, when the Prime Minister announces 'mission accomplished' on energy prices, when he and his Treasurer and home affairs minister and potential contender for the Prime Minister's position announce that energy prices are coming down, go and talk to real Australians; they just don't agree with you.

This is the real issue—the third issue. We have a Prime Minister whose premiership of the position, his stewardship of the Prime Minister's position, has been marked from day one; he never fights for the principles he believes in. He never understands that when you appease your critics and when you surrender your principles, your critics come back and they want more and more, and now they just want your job. The critics in the Liberal Party and the conservatives can smell the weakness within the Prime Minister. They can sniff the weakness in the Prime Minister. They can see the vulnerability in this Prime Minister. No matter how many times the Prime Minister changes his views on climate change, no matter how many times he's changed his view on the republic, advocating now the morbid argument that Australia can't be a republic until the current Queen passes away—he keeps giving in. Let's remember his judgement on the banking royal commission. The Prime Minister has notorious poor judgement because he does not actually fight for anything he believes in.

When this Prime Minister rolled the previous Prime Minister, I thought that we would see a different kind of politics, that we would have a sensible form of politics. I thought my job would be harder—I concede that. But I thought, at last, we could build a national consensus on climate change, on having an Australian head of state, on actually doing something to look after the middle class and working class of this country. But the Prime Minister, having obtained the highest office in the land, we've discovered, never fights for anything except his own job.

Of course, he has notoriously poor judgement. Only someone of Turnbullian genius could argue against a banking royal commission for the last two years. Only this government could have argued in favour of giving the states the right to have income tax powers so that there's double income tax in this country. Only this government could still hang on to the corporate tax cuts at this point in the electoral cycle. Here's a prediction: this Prime Minister is so afraid of people's reactions to him, he so craves positive polls, he so needs the approval of people, that he will drop the corporate tax cuts, because he never fights for anything he believes in.

There are real challenges facing the Australian people which deserve to be heard but which are getting neglected under this government—under this narcissistic, selfish, self-obsessed government. Government MPs—a few of them are yelling out interjections—know that the people of Australia are more than frustrated with their conduct today. They know they have a government focused on themselves, and not on the people of Australia. There are real problems out there in Australian society. Wages are at a record low. I thought I was in a parallel universe last week when the Prime Minister said that wages are getting better. They are at record lows. If you don't believe me, ask the people who are not getting a pay rise in this country. They don't live like you. They don't live like the people in parliament. Many Australians have not had a pay rise. Many Australians have seen their conditions go back. We have many Australians in casual and part-time work. We have many Australians working in labour-hire jobs alongside permanent workers, yet the labour-hire workers are paid less. We have many Australians who feel the system is broken. By the way, the conduct of the government today would give them no reason for optimism that the system is not broken.

There are other issues in this country which need to be addressed. One is the unacceptable blow-out in waiting lists for aged care. Look at the government—they think they're so clever. Every day the waiting lists get longer. Then you've got to look at the general dismantling of our healthcare system under a government who'd rather give tax cuts to private health insurance companies than rein in the premiums they charge Australians. Then you look at our schools, our TAFE and our universities. This government is not properly funding schools. This government is not properly funding TAFE. This government is not properly funding universities.

When you look at the ranks of this government, some of them perhaps genuinely don't understand these issues. But what chance do some of the backbenchers have when they have a Prime Minister so out of touch, when they have a Prime Minister who gets up every day in question time and says how well things are going? Tell that to the farmers experiencing drought. Tell that to young people who can't get apprenticeships. Tell that to older Australians who can't get the aged-care assessments they need to get the support that they require so they can live their remaining years with dignity. And, of course, we've got to look at the mess they've made of child care. A quarter of Australian families are paying more for child care than they were before this Prime Minister was the Prime Minister.

However, it is not just the division and it is not just the fact that the government is out of touch with the real issues of Australians and so absorbed with themselves. To be fair to the Prime Minister, it's not all his fault alone. The problem is that the Liberal Party of Australia is not the Liberal Party they once were. It is riven by fundamental disagreements at the heart of the government. That is why the member for Dickson feels the need to speak up for the conservatives. That is why so many of the brave anonymous assassins of the Prime Minister over there say that this government is somehow not living up to conservative standards. This is a government at war with itself, and, as much as they may say it's not, as much as those in it say they are economic supermen making Australia better for all Australians, the fact of the matter is: this is a government that is desperate to survive.

Members of the backbench and brave members of the front bench: we know that, when you drop your silly corporate tax cuts, that is a battle won by Labor. But we know that war is not over. We are determined. The best way to stop corporate tax cuts in this country is to vote Labor at the next election.

Look at the way this government has pursued the ABC. The old Liberal Party, the party of Fraser and Menzies, would not have attacked the ABC. Now we have, in the job specification of the Minister for Communications, to be a serial complainant about the ABC.

And of course we see the ongoing debates about school funding. The best way to look after the government schools, the Catholic schools and independent schools, is not to rob Peter to pay Paul but to properly fund all schools based upon need.

And this is a government that loves to talk about a 'big stick'. In the game of question time bingo yesterday, this government had the big stick on energy companies and the big stick on banks. The problem is: at the same time, they're trying to legislate tax cuts for the very companies they say they're tough on.

The real problem in Australia at the moment is that this Prime Minister is simply not up to the job. And no amount of Mogadoned behaviour at press conferences after leadership changes can unmake this truth. The reality is, Prime Minister: you have 35 people behind you who, this morning, voted not to have you as their leader. And I predict: that number will get larger. Today, you may well have all the government members vote to have confidence in you, but doesn't that just show the parallel world to which this parliament has descended? This morning, 35 of your colleagues, who you thought were your great supporters, voted to do you in. And on Thursday, or in two weeks time, or after the next poll, which you worship so foolishly, what will then happen is: more of them will do you in.

So let us be done with the dishonesty that this parliament has confidence in the Prime Minister. Your colleagues don't want you. You've exercised notoriously poor judgement, because you are as weak a Prime Minister as we've seen since Billy McMahon. You are a dismal failure when it comes to energy policy, telling us: it's not your fault; it's the fault of individual members of your government. You have no idea how the real people live. You are hopelessly out of touch with their views. And finally, and fundamentally, you lead a divided government. And nothing you can do will change that fact.

The SPEAKER: Is the motion seconded? The Deputy Leader of the Opposition?

Ms PLIBERSEK (Sydney—Deputy Leader of the Opposition): If the Prime Minister wants to second the motion—

The SPEAKER: Is the motion seconded? Or it'll be lapsed.

Ms PLIBERSEK: The motion is seconded, and I reserve my right to speak.

Mr TURNBULL (Wentworth—Prime Minister) (14:28): So we have that tirade from the Leader of the Opposition—the man who, as a union leader, sold out his members again and again. He was prepared to exchange penalty rates for cleaners in return for a secret deal with the employer, with money going back to the union. This is a great leader, we're told! He wants to be Prime Minister. He voted against making payments between large companies and unions transparent. Can you believe that! He's actually in favour of secret and corrupting payments. He didn't want them to be banned. He didn't want the public to know, the members of unions to know, about it—one deal after another, behind the backs of the men and women he was supposed to represent.

Right through this parliament, we have been able, despite his negativity, to deliver one great economic step in advancing the interests of hardworking Australian families. The Leader of the Opposition doesn't seem to care that last year we had the largest jobs growth in Australia's history, the largest jobs growth in any single year, over 400,000 jobs. And we have economic growth which is now faster, higher, than any of the G7 economies. Economic management is a key priority for governments. There you are. Highest jobs growth, high economic growth and employment. We now have unemployment at its lowest level since November 2012. We want to see it lower and we want to see wages growth higher, but what we are doing is delivering stronger economic growth, more jobs and lower unemployment. What that will deliver, as the Reserve Bank was saying only today, is higher wages, and we are starting to see that movement in higher wages. It all comes from a stronger economy. That, we've been able to do at the same time as we have reduced taxes for Australians, Australian families.

We've introduced and passed through the House—with a one-seat majority, he reminds me of regularly—and through the Senate, where we are in a minority, the largest personal income tax reform in 20 years. So hardworking Australian families, middle-income taxpayers, are getting $530 back each during this current financial year.

Mr Snowden interjecting—

The SPEAKER: The member for Lingiari is warned!

Mr TURNBULL: By 2024 we will see 94 per cent of Australians paying no more than 32½ cents on any extra dollar they earn. We also have succeeded, and this is a vital priority, in being able to bring down youth unemployment to its lowest level since April 2012. More than 57,000 young Australians found a job in the 12 months to July this year. That is, again, a reminder of what a strong economy does. You get more economic growth, more investment and more jobs. And the female participation rate is at record levels.

We hear from the Leader of the Opposition his complaints about economic management. Stronger economic growth than any of the G7 economies, record jobs growth, the lowest unemployment rate since 2012, the lowest youth unemployment rate since 2012 and the highest female participation rate—that is what you get from a strong economy, and that is what we're delivering. We have delivered lower taxes for small and medium Australian businesses. These are overwhelmingly family-owned businesses, and these are businesses turning over less than $50 million a year, which employ over half the private sector workforce. These are not big companies. These are not giant multinationals. But they're employing millions of Australians and they are employing more of them because of our reforms.

The honourable member refers to energy. Let's be quite clear about this. The Labor Party's policies on energy are a repeat of policies that have failed. They want to have a 50 per cent Renewable Energy Target when we know the Renewable Energy Target was a mistake. It is widely recognised as such, called out by the ACCC. What it did was displace dispatchable power and resulted in huge amounts of renewable power, regardless of what it did to the reliability of the system. And the member for Port Adelaide knows all about that because he comes from South Australia, where energy is at its most expensive and its least reliable.

What we're committed to doing is delivering cheaper power. Prices fell in the June quarter 1.3 per cent, not a huge fall but they're coming down. And we've seen lower prices quoted by retailers for the current quarter. The new default market offer that we are going to establish, based on the recommendation from the ACCC inquiry which we initiated, will result in substantial savings for consumers and for businesses—for consumers, up to $416 a year and for small businesses, $1,457 a year.

Ms Butler interjecting—

The SPEAKER: The member for Griffith will leave under 94(a).

The member for Griffith then left the chamber.

Mr TURNBULL: The honourable member talked about funding for health and hospitals. We are spending record amounts in every area of health—health, hospitals, Medicare, PBS. When new life-saving drugs are recommended by the Pharmaceutical Benefits Advisory Committee, we list them. We don't have to do as Labor did; they postponed their listing because they couldn't afford it. A stronger economy enables you to do all that. We have increased bulk-billing rates. They're now at record levels: 86.1 per cent of all GP services are bulk-billed. Labor wants to repeat the 'Mediscare' lies that they ran at the last election and at every by-election, but the reality is that every public hospital in Australia is receiving more funding under our government than it did under Labor.

In terms of schools, again, the Labor lies are rolled out. We're spending a record $249.8 billion over the next 10 years on schools and we've cleaned up Labor's 27 'special deals' that saw students getting less funding in one state than in another. In terms of national security, Labor neglected our Australian Defence. They did not commission one new naval ship in their whole time in office. We have 53 vessels either under construction or under design, and that is because we are determined to keep Australia safe and we are able to pay for it because of the stronger economy that delivers stronger government revenues, and enables us, in addition to doing all that, to bring the budget back into balance a year early.

The alternative that Labor offers us is an abandonment of every principle and value the Labor Party used to stand for. The Labor Party used to stand for aspiration. Not anymore. It's a mystery. They used to stand for people getting ahead and having a go. Not anymore. We have the politics of envy being rolled out in every electorate around the country. Labor is going after small businesses, family owned businesses. It's going after businesses—no matter how small they are, it wants them to pay more tax. It's going after individual taxpayers. It's going after retirees. I heard the Leader of the Opposition talk about self-funded retirees. Well, the Leader of the Opposition is going after their savings. Anyone with a portfolio with Australian shares in it—that type of investor or self-funded retiree—the Labor Party wants to take away 30 per cent of their income. It is a cash grab that will leave all of those families short. That's the Labor approach: going after families, going after self-funded retirees and going after businesses. And their energy policies can have only one result, which is higher and higher energy prices.

We are taking action to defend Australian families, get taxes down, electricity prices down, jobs up and investment up—the energetic economic growth that we need which results in higher wages, as we're starting to see. That's our commitment. We're standing up for Australian families, and for the Australian workers that the Leader of the Opposition abandoned in his union career and now abandons in this chamber.

Ms PLIBERSEK (Sydney—Deputy Leader of the Opposition) (14:38): This parliament has no confidence in this Prime Minister. You know that no-one on this side has confidence in the Prime Minister, and what we also know is that half the people on the other side have no confidence in this Prime Minister. If they weren't such lions in the party room and lambs—or sheep—in here, they would join us in voting on this motion that this parliament has no confidence in this Prime Minister. This horror show has gone on long enough. It's bad for the country and it's bad for Australian families to have a government so divided and so unable to govern.

Australians are sick to death of it. They're sick of power prices and pollution going up. They're sick of wages flat-lining. They're sick of the cuts to health and education. They're sick of the chaos in aged care and child care. They're sick of it. And, all the while, all the Liberals can do is focus on themselves, focus on their own ambitions. Today the Prime Minister is boasting about what a great job he is doing. If he is doing such a great job, why did half his colleagues vote against him today? And, of course, he goes straight to attacking the Leader of the Opposition for his background as a union leader. I'll tell you what, I would stand beside someone who has spent his working life defending Australian working people before I would stand beside someone who has spent his life as a merchant banker!

Labor is united. Labor stands ready to govern, because for five years now we have shown unity and we have shown discipline. Under the leadership of the Leader of the Opposition, we have the better policies and we have the better people. And we saw it in those by-elections that the Prime Minister said were a test of leadership. As it happens, yes, they were a test of leadership, weren't they? We have the better policies in tax, with bigger tax cuts for low- and middle-income Australians. Millions of them would be almost twice as well off under Labor's tax policies. Health, education, industrial relations, environment, energy and climate change—we have better policies in all of these areas than the government, because they're so busy focusing on themselves.

Ms Julie Bishop: Where's the money coming from?

Ms PLIBERSEK: The foreign minister interjects, 'Where's the money coming from?' Well we're not giving $80 billion in big business tax cuts, are we? We're not giving tax cuts to the top end of town, are we? That's where the money comes from.

Mr Speaker, do you know what we heard yesterday? The Prime Minister confirming that it doesn't matter who's sitting at the despatch box; it's the member for Warringah calling the shots, because the member for Warringah has right of veto over every government policy. What a position to be in! And do you know what? Next it will be the member for Dickson. The member for Dickson sitting on the lap of the member for Warringah, like a really scary wooden puppet come to life, with the hand of the member for Warringah up his, um, back! He's back, like Chucky! He's back, like Glenn Close in Fatal Attraction! That's right.

What's the alternative? The member for Dickson, voted by doctors to be the worst health minister in 40 years. What a record! He cut $50 billion from our hospitals, cut hundreds of millions from preventive health and from dental care. He cut his way through the health portfolio, took on immigration and has presided over an abject failure in over five years to find new homes for those people, including children, on Manus and Nauru who should have had permanent homes before now.

This is a Frankenstein's monster of a government. It has the face of the member for Wentworth, it has the policies of the member for Warringah and it has the cold, shrivelled soul of the member for Dickson. It's a Frankenstein's government—a Frankenstein's monster of a government. In five years they've had—what actually is their energy policy now? What is their energy policy? What is their tax policy when they dump their company tax cuts? What's their education policy? What's their health policy? In the five years they've had to come up with a plan for this nation, all they've done is fight amongst themselves like a bunch of children.

We've agreed to keep it to five minutes on each side, so I'm going to end with this: this parliament, this chaos, can only be resolved with an election, because the parliament has no confidence in this Prime Minister. We don't and most of you don't. We are united, we are ready to govern.

Mr McCORMACK (Riverina—Deputy Prime Minister, Minister for Infrastructure and Transport and Leader of The Nationals) (14:44): We reject this motion outright, Mr Speaker! We've got confidence in the Prime Minister.

But we know a few things about this opposition leader. We know that he stands for higher taxes. We know that he and his party stand for higher energy prices. And look at the sorry lot behind him! We've got the member for Watson. Let's not forget—people haven't got that short a memory not to recall what Labor stood for when it was in power. The member for Watson wanted to take the water rights, the irrigation rights, away from my farmers and away from farmers right throughout river communities in Australia. That's what he stood for.

And then we have the member for McMahon. Remember all of those boats? Look at the member for McMahon's face. His was the face that launched hundreds of ships. That's right—hundreds of ships! They came, and there were 55,000 people who arrived unauthorised. He was responsible for a lot of those. There were 1,200 deaths at sea, and that was tragic. There were 800 boats. Labor put more beds in detention centres than they ever put in hospitals.

Then we move along to the member for Port Adelaide.

Mr Brian Mitchell interjecting—

The SPEAKER: The member for Lyons is warned.

Mr McCORMACK: What a sorry figure. He recently described the blackouts in South Australia which caused so much despair for businesses and families throughout South Australia as nothing more than 'a hiccup'.

Mr Brian Mitchell interjecting—

The SPEAKER: The member for Lyons will leave under 94(a).

The member for Lyons then left the chamber.

Mr McCORMACK: Let's not forget the member for Rankin. He was the chief of staff for the member for Lilley, who stood at this very spot and said, 'The four years of surpluses I announce tonight.' Where are those four years of surpluses? That's why this nation is in so much trouble. It is because of the member for Lilley. Thank goodness he's still here, because every time we look at him we can remind ourselves of the debt and despair that Labor in six sorry years plunged this nation into.

Then we have the member for Shortland and the member for Hunter. They should listen more to the member for Paterson. She sounded them out recently. She did. She stuck up for coal workers. She stuck up for coalmines. She stuck up for coal-fired power stations. Good on you, Member for Paterson. Come over this way. We believe you. It's a shame the member for Shortland and the member for Hunter don't, because they don't stand up for coal workers. I tell you what—our people do. We stand up for coal workers and we stand up for all workers. That's what we do. That's why we are lowering the company tax rate. We are getting it down to 25 per cent. What does the member for Maribyrnong want to do? He wants to push it up well beyond 30 per cent. That's what Labor stand for. They don't stand up for workers. Look at the member for Maribyrnong's record—Chiquita Mushrooms and Cleanevent. He sold those union members out. Rest assured that, if he gets the opportunity as Prime Minister, he'll do it again.

Mr McCORMACK: Don't you start, Member for Eden-Monaro. Why haven't you stood up? Why didn't you stand up for ships when Labor didn't build a ship? Not one ship did Labor build in six years. We are getting on with the job. We are spending billions on our defence program to make sure that our national security is what it ought to be. What did Labor do?

The SPEAKER: The member for Eden-Monaro is warned.

Mr McCORMACK: They lowered the amount of spending on defence to its lowest level as a ratio to GDP since 1938. And we all know what happened in 1939. What else did Labor do? I'll tell you what they did—they shut down the live cattle trade to Indonesia. But did they tell Indonesia, one of our great trading partners? No, they didn't. They had to read about it in the media. Labor do not stand up for the regions. We proudly do. We are standing up for them at the moment. They are drought-stricken. I appreciate that that is a concern of all members of parliament, but we are standing up for those drought-stricken farmers. They must watch this debate and think—

Ms Owens interjecting—

The SPEAKER: The member for Parramatta is warned.

Mr McCORMACK: 'What an unedifying spectacle that is.' They must think: 'Why are Labor carrying on like this? They should be standing up for the farming communities, standing up for workers, standing up for low energy costs and standing up for workers and families and all the things that are important to Australia.' But they are not. We are, and we will certainly continue to do that. We have got the back of the Prime Minister and the back of the Australian people.

Mr BURKE (Watson) (14:49): Well, 35 of them have the back of the Prime Minister, there's no doubt about that—35 of them have knives in the back of the Prime Minister. If there was a moment in the speech of the Prime Minister that really said it all, it was when he started to talk about somebody abandoning their principles. There is no-one in this chamber who has a record of anything they claim being a high point of principle ultimately being doomed the way this Prime Minister does.

He told us he believed in the republic, and it was doomed. He told us that we could trust the banks, and that argument was doomed. He told he believed in the emissions intensity scheme—doomed. Then he begged that we support a clean energy target—doomed. Then he said we needed to support his National Energy Guarantee—doomed. Then he told us he was passionate about his big business tax cuts—doomed again. This man now believes that his party will continue to stand beside him—doomed. It's not going to happen. No-one believes it's going to happen. We've all seen this movie before.

We've all watched the member for Dickson while this debate's been on, furiously doing a bit of writing and then doing a bit of texting back and forth with his colleagues. I'll tell you, if he only had 35 votes at the beginning of this debate, we can only imagine what he's got after the Prime Minister's speech. As this debate goes on, we all know where it's headed. It's a choice. It's a choice between somebody who has always abandoned what he said he was passionate about and somebody who has always been passionate about the worst possible things.

Think of this, Prime Minister: the person who nearly half of your colleagues prefer was the author of the GP tax. The person who nearly half of your colleagues prefer is the person who cut $50 billion from hospitals. The person who nearly half of your colleagues prefer is the person who axed national dental programs and who was voted by doctors as the worst health minister for 50 years.

This Prime Minister looks at his beliefs and says: 'No, I'll throw that one away. I don't need to believe in that. Any member of the backbench can have a right of veto over anything, no matter how important I said it was.' But the alternative is somebody who has looked at the policies of both the Abbott government and the Turnbull government as we now move to the new riff of the Abbott-Turnbull-Dutton government—that's going to be the new riff we're heading to. It's going to be somebody who sees a government that cuts penalty rates and says, 'That's not extreme enough.' It's somebody who sees funding cuts to schools and says, 'That's not extreme enough.' They see funding cuts to hospitals and say, 'They just haven't cut far enough.' They've seen government cuts to the pension on the books here ever since the 2014 budget and say, 'They're just not going hard enough.' They see an NBN that they make slower, that comes later, that's more expensive, and they say, 'They just won't have wrecked it enough.' The man says of giving $17 billion to the banks, 'They just haven't gone far enough.'

It is a choice between a man who abandons his principles and one whose views are so extreme that he boycotted the national apology. That's what they debated this morning. That's the choice that is driving this government in half—a choice between somebody who stands for nothing and somebody who stands for all the worst possible principles. All they know, when it comes to it, is not what they believe; all they know is who they hate. At the press conference to justify why the Liberal Party fell apart this morning, when the member for Dickson went and gave that media conference he started reiterating his CV, telling us all the wonderful things that he'd done. Then he got to the reason why he just had to challenge. The reason he gave was the Leader of the Opposition. They will blame the Labor Party for everything, including this morning's leadership challenge.

The Australian people don't care that you hate Labor, but the Australian people do care that you hold them in contempt. The government show that they hold the Australian people in contempt when people are paying for the division of the government every day. They pay for the division in this government when they pay for the increased costs in health care. They pay for the division in this government when they pay for their increasing energy bills. They pay for the division in this government when they pay for the fact that everything goes up except their wages, and then the government comes here and votes against protecting their penalty rates. This government, under this Prime Minister, lets the Australian people down all the time. Now they've added that they don't just hate the Labor Party; they hate each other too. That's no way to govern this country.

Ms JULIE BISHOP (Curtin—Minister for Foreign Affairs) (14:54): The Turnbull government is delivering for the people of Australia through lower taxes, lower prices and more jobs. We are fighting for the people of Australia, because we have an economic plan to grow our economy and ensure there are more jobs and more job opportunities. We are the party that backs the small businesses, the mums and dads who take a risk, who start a business, who grow a business and who export their goods and services around the world. These are the people who the coalition government back to drive our economic growth and create jobs for the Australian people. That's why the Turnbull government is backing small business and medium-sized business through tax cuts. That's why we are fighting for lower costs. That's why we have our energy plan—to bring down the cost of electricity so that our businesses can compete around the world. That's why we have a plan to fix the GST—so that there's a level playing field across Australia for all businesses who are operating in this country.

We have turned the corner on Labor's debt. We will return the budget to surplus a year early in 2019-20. Do you know the last time a Labor government delivered a budget surplus? The last time Labor delivered a budget surplus the Berlin Wall was still standing, Ronald Reagan was still in the White House, Maggie Thatcher was still in Downing Street and Bob Hawke was in the Lodge. Twenty-five years ago was the last time that Labor delivered a surplus.

We've fixed the economic mess that we inherited. Remember that after Labor came into government, in the six years of Labor, they blew a $20 billion surplus and never delivered one. They blew billions and billions of dollars in savings. We went from zero net government debt to massive debt. In the six years of the coalition government, we've turned the corner on Labor's debt and we're getting back into surplus.

Did these things have an effect on our economy? Yes, they did. For a start, because of Labor's economic mismanagement, they cut defence spending to the lowest level since 1938. Not one new naval vessel was commissioned for our Navy. Not only did that put at risk thousands and thousands of jobs in the defence industry's supply chain; it put our national security at risk. Then we inherited the mess of the NBN off Labor. In their entire six years they only connected 50,000 households. We are connecting 50,000 every two weeks. Every two weeks we achieve more than Labor did in their entire six years.

What else did Labor do through their mismanagement of the economy? They stopped listing life-saving drugs on the PBS. They stopped listing drugs. Because we have now fixed the budget, because we have now paid off the Labor debt, we are now able to list life-saving drugs on the PBS. At last count, there were 1,800 new drugs listed on the PBS.

But, members, the greatest policy failure in a generation on Labor's part—and, believe me, there's a big list, so I don't say this lightly—was losing control of our borders and inspiring the people-smuggling trade. There were 800 boats, 50,000 people and thousands of children in detention centres across Australia and in our region and 1,200 deaths at sea that we know of under Labor. That's why, through our Operation Sovereign Borders, we restored integrity to our sovereignty and to our borders and we put the people smugglers out of business.

Under the policies of the Turnbull government, we now have the fastest-growing economy in all of the G7. We're growing faster than all the G7 countries. We're growing faster than New Zealand. We're growing faster than South Korea. We have created an environment that has seen 300,000 new jobs created in the last 12 months. That's 1,000 new jobs a day under this government. Unemployment is now 5.3 per cent. That's lower than, say, Canada. It's still too high, but that's why we're working night and day to ensure we can get that unemployment rate down. It's the lowest in six years, but it's going lower. Where does Labor get its inspiration from? It's Venezuela, with higher taxes, higher inflation and lower jobs growth. The coalition stands for the workers.

Mr BOWEN (McMahon) (15:00): There were sighs of relief when the member for Wentworth became the Prime Minister of Australia, but, for the last three years, there have been groans of disappointment as the Australian people have expressed the view which 35 of his colleagues expressed today—that this man is simply not up to the task. This is a Prime Minister without principle and without power. He has betrayed every principle he's ever had and yesterday he gave away his power. He said, 'Any Liberal Party or National Party MP who crosses the floor will mean that the government can't implement policy.' He vacated policy leadership to the climate change deniers and the extreme right wing of his party. And how did they thank him? With a midnight knock at the door. This is a Prime Minister who has lost the confidence of his colleagues and who long ago lost the confidence of the people.

The Leader of the Opposition and the Deputy Leader of the Opposition have pointed out that this Prime Minister does not have the confidence of the House. It's a statement of fact. We have no confidence in him and 35 of his colleagues have no confidence in him. The National Party didn't get a vote, but we know they don't have confidence in him. There's an even better reason to carry this motion: the carrying of a motion of no confidence will oblige this Prime Minister to hop in a car, go down to the Governor-General and advise an election. Let the Australian people cast their judgement on this man and on this government to make way for a government with unity of purpose and unity of agenda. That's why this motion should be carried. The Australian people deserve to have their say and to have their judgement on this Prime Minister.

We should remember, as his colleagues remembered today, what this Prime Minister's case for election was. He said to his colleagues that they'd lost 30 Newspolls and that he could provide better economic leadership. I pointed out on the Alan Jones program this week that he has lost 37 Newspolls, but I was corrected by Mr Jones—it's 38. Then we have the new economic leadership that he promised. This is a Prime Minister who has a one-point economic plan: giving away $80 billion in corporate tax cuts. That one-point plan will die an unlamented death in the other place later this afternoon, and, when that plan dies, this prime ministership should die with it. When that plan is defeated, this prime ministership should be defeated with it, because this Prime Minister had one idea: give $80 billion to big business and let it trickle down. He had one idea. That was his answer to low-wages growth: to cut wages through letting penalty rates be cut and to cut taxes for big business in the hope and the forlorn prayer that it be allowed to trickle down to the workers of Australia.

This is a man without an agenda other than that one-point plan. This is a man who has, as energy prices have risen, in fairness, had many plans. He had the National Energy Guarantee, the clean energy target and the emissions intensity scheme—none of which have survived contact with the enemy. By 'the enemy', I mean those sitting behind him. None of those plans have withstood the scrutiny of the House. They have not even been brought in for a vote, because they have not withstood the scrutiny of his colleagues. This is a man who's big idea was to increase the GST and then allow income taxes. This is a man who has not had the courage of his convictions to follow through with his economic beliefs and put them to the test. The member for Warringah put it well last night as he left the parliament. He said, 'The question now is: what are the principles of the Prime Minister? What are the convictions of this Prime Minister? What does this man stand for?' What an epitaph for this Prime Minister that his predecessor should ask the question: what does he stand for? The answer, of course, is very, very little other than his own survival. Well, his colleagues worked it out today. Thirty-five of his colleagues expressed a view today. They now have the opportunity to vote accordingly. The House now has an opportunity to say what his colleagues said to him today: 'You have stayed too long for any good you have done. The time has come for you to depart.'

Mr MORRISON (Cook—Treasurer) (15:04): They are very cocky, aren't they? They are very, very cocky. It was the Leader of the Opposition who said, 'Just leave the keys to the Lodge there in the door.' That's what he said. As they would have heard those words from the Leader of the Opposition, I reckon a chill would have gone through Australians, for two very important reasons: Australians do not trust a potential Shorten government to run a stronger economy or to keep Australians safe. They know that they will not be safe under a Shorten-led government. They know that their jobs, their wages, the fiscal strength of this government, the AAA credit rating and the future they hope for will not be safe under a Shorten government. But they can trust the Turnbull government. They can trust the Liberal and National parties because our plan for a stronger economy is working and our plan for a safer Australia is working.

Our plan is ensuring that unemployment is going down and jobs are going up. We have had 95,500 young people get a job in the last fiscal year, the best result in 30 years, and that deserves a strong cheer. That's what that deserves. We get no cheers from that side because there are jobs being created in this economy under the plan of this government. Debt has turned a corner. The deficit is falling and will return to balance next year. The AAA credit rating has been ensured and kept under this government. And, as for thuggish unions and big companies who want to take people for a ride, we've put in the powers and are putting in the powers to stop them in their tracks, while this Leader of the Opposition cheers them all on.

On top of that, our plan for keeping Australians safe is working. It is this government, a Liberal National government, that is legislating to protect Australians from foreign interference. It is this government and these parties that have put in place the funding to restore our national security agencies, our police officers and our border protection. The ABCC has been put in there to put a real cop on the beat; union thugs were off the leash under a Shorten led government, but they are certainly not under this government. Our Defence Force is being rebuilt after the waste and the neglect of the Labor Party, who let them run down to the lowest level since pre-war times, and they should be ashamed of that.

But it is also this government that has been protecting not only our values but our borders. We ended the absolute chaos and wreckage that came particularly from the shadow Treasurer, the worst immigration minister in this country's history. He made the biggest contribution to 800 boats, 50,000 people and more than 6,000 children in detention. Every single one of them, including those who were otherwise supported by the Greens, should hang their heads in shame for the human carnage and wreckage they were responsible for and the lives they destroyed by their neglect. We've been talking about a big stick to take to energy companies. This mob couldn't find a big stick with a flashlight and two pairs of hands. Under them, there will be no stick, the unions will be off the leash and the big companies will be off the leash. They will run away under the weakness of this opposition.

But more important than that, and more important than the strong policies we have, are the strong beliefs that underpin those policies: the fair go for those who have a go and who put in the hard yards. That's what our tax cuts have been about for personal income tax, for small business, for farmers—for all of them. We are ensuring that we reject the disgraceful politics of envy championed by this Leader of the Labor Party. We don't think that for you to do better someone has to do worse. All Australians will recoil from the punishing taxes of this potential Shorten government. Five billion dollars a year of a slug on retirees, on pensioners, on those who have worked hard, small businesses—that's what this fella has ensured for them if he is elected.

We have an immigration policy that brings people to this country who want to make a contribution, not take one. We have a policy to ensure that the best form of welfare is a job. We don't think tax is a privilege; we think it is a burden, which should be eased on all of the Australian people who work hard. And, when it comes to our sovereign interests, this side of the House always believes we will decide.

Mr ALBANESE (Grayndler) (15:10): There were two words missing from the speeches of those opposing this motion of no confidence in this Prime Minister. What were those two words? 'Prime' and 'minister'. Not one of the speakers has defended Malcolm Turnbull's prime ministership. The speeches today are typical of what has characterised this government or, should I say, this opposition-in-exile, because what they have done is turned the coalition into the 'no-alition'. They seek to define themselves by what they're against, not by what they're for. And that is why they have nothing less than a crisis of identity, a crisis of belief between the views of the current Prime Minister and the views of the past and future prime ministers. That is why they have such a problem, because you can't define yourselves by just what you're against. We know that, when they stand up and talk about the reason why they should stay on the Treasury bench, they speak about a tax on trade unions, a tax on public education, a tax on public health and a tax on the public broadcaster. They speak about a tax against the Leader of the Opposition and all of our team. They don't present a vision for how they will actually take the country forward.

It's there in their policies and we should have seen it. The current Prime Minister took over as communications minister and he actually does get the interweb thingy. As his predecessor said, he invented it! But what's he done? Twenty-one million metres of copper wire—in the 21st century. That is what he has done. It's so last century! When it comes to climate change—he gets that too—he put forward the emissions intensity scheme, but can't follow it through. Then he gets the Chief Scientist to come up with a policy, so the Chief Scientist comes up with one: the Clean Energy Target. We said, 'We'll have a look at that. That looks okay.' Then it disappeared. Then we had various versions of the National Energy Guarantee, and he walked away from that as well. He says he supports infrastructure and public transport. He loves taking selfies on trains and trams. We don't want selfies; people want trains and trams funded with dollars—the Melbourne Metro and the Cross River Rail. No, that's not good enough. He'll go to Melbourne, he'll go to Brisbane and he'll go to the opening of Redcliffe rail; he just won't fund rail lines in inner Brisbane.

The fact is that this motion should be carried because we know that a majority supports this motion: 69 on this side and 35 on that side. That's before we get to the Nats; that's before we get to Barnaby's mob. They're not part of that. See, you're up to 104. You're in triple figures—

The SPEAKER: The member for Grayndler will refer to people by their correct titles.

Mr ALBANESE: before you get to the crossbenchers or before you get to the National Party. The fact is that, under this Leader of the Opposition, we have been working to have a plan for government. We have put forward economic policy. We've put forward really difficult tax changes under this shadow Treasurer. We've put forward policies to give fairness in the workplace. We've put forward environmental policies. We understand that Australians want nothing more and nothing less than for their kids to have more opportunity in life than they had, and they want them to inherit an environment that's better than the one that we enjoy. But, instead of that true aspiration—which isn't for another yacht; the aspiration of Australians is for their family, for their community and for their country—we've got the selfish attitude of those opposite. Then the Treasurer, at the moment, had the gumption to speak about the 'big stick'. I and the next speaker get to talk every Friday morning, early, and last week I said that the problem was that they were using the big stick on themselves! Well, I was wrong—because now they're using it on each other! And we saw it this morning.

Mr PYNE (Sturt—Leader of the House and Minister for Defence Industry) (15:15):

This motion should be defeated because this House does have confidence in the Prime Minister of Australia, the member for Wentworth. This motion should be voted against because this House and this government have confidence in the Prime Minister, the member for Wentworth.

This side of the House welcomes a debate about character. We are more than happy to fight the next election on the character of the Prime Minister versus the character of the Leader of the Opposition, because this Leader of the Opposition—

Mr Keogh interjecting—

The SPEAKER: The member for Burt is just back—

Mr PYNE: is a political fraud. He is a political fraud. He just gave a speech dripping with hypocrisy, dripping with bitterness—a venomous, vicious, vituperative speech from a man who nobody on his side of the House trusts. The Leader of the Opposition has left a trail of destruction behind him throughout his political career. This is a man his colleagues do not trust. This is a man who needs the CFMEU to break up meetings of the ALP in Victoria, to protect himself from his own members. This Leader of the Opposition is prepared to bring union thugs into every single forum of the Labor Party in Victoria, to control preselections, to control policy outcomes, to give them $2½ million worth of donations. And why? Because this Leader of the Opposition always puts himself first, ahead of every single other person.

He has a list of victims as long as your arm, not just within the former Labor Party Caucus and not just people like Bob Sercombe, the former member for Maribyrnong, who was cut down by the Leader of the Opposition in his own electorate. Take Gavan O'Connor, the former member for Corio; he got in the way; he had to be dispatched by the Leader of the Opposition so that his friends could get seats. But worst of all was when they tried to take out Simon Crean, one of the doyens of the Labor Party in Victoria, a former Leader of the Opposition. The Leader of the Opposition's faction had to take him out because he got in the way of this man's quest for power.

This man's quest for power was so low that he was prepared to take the penalty rates away from the lowest paid workers of Australia, from cleaners at Cleanevent. This was the man who thought: 'The cleaners of Australia are vulnerable, and I can get some benefit out of them. I can get an advantage out of them.' Do you know what the advantage was, Mr Speaker? Lists, so he could increase his power in the ALP; cash, so he could buy more memberships within the ALP; and preselection power in the Victorian ALP. And the poor old workers at Cleanevent were the ones who had to suffer. They were the ones that had to go without their penalty rates. And this is a man who comes in and gives speeches about penalty rates.

But that wasn't enough, of course. The workers at Chiquita Mushrooms got exactly the same treatment. The workers at Chiquita Mushrooms were dispatchable as well, along with the cleaners from Cleanevent.

And other leaders of the Labor Party couldn't trust him, either. Julia Gillard couldn't trust him. Kevin Rudd didn't trust him. And it was written about in Paul Kelly's book. Paul Kelly wrote: 'The distrust between Rudd and Shorten was intense and enduring. The Gillard camp was contemptuous of Shorten, considering him weak and duplicitous.' That's one thing she got right. 'Neither side trusted him, and neither side revised its view.'

If the Leader of the Opposition wants an election on character, we'll take it every day, because this side of the House backs the Prime Minister of Australia, the member for Wentworth. The worst subject you could possibly fight an election on would be character. If you decide to have an election around character, we'll line up our Prime Minister against your Leader of the Opposition every single day.

We know what we stand for. We stand for lower taxes, we stand for families and we stand for farmers. We stand for balancing the budget. We stand for putting more money into infrastructure and industry. And that's why this side of the House has governed for two-thirds of the last 70 years: because our values are the values of the Australian people. That's why we've won six of the last eight elections and that's why we're going to win the next one, next year!

The SPEAKER: The question is that the motion moved by the Leader of the Opposition be agreed to.

RESULTS

Mr MARAFIN (Maribinong—One Director) (14:09): I'd like to do the following:

Parliament does not recognize the Minister

Come on

SOURCE: Himura:

One piece of history is the glass created to protect and provide Merivilnon.

Parliament does not recognize the Minister

Australia is now the Prime Minister alone. The Prime Minister has no power and the Prime Minister has no politics. This leads you to welding on the ground. It seems that the day saw the separation of governments but today it is difficult to manage the resources of the region and Australia does not understand it. Since the prime minister is a man of power, ability and skill, the parliament voted with confidence. To make that happen again If half the government is not Australia's Prime Minister, will it be Australia?

The Prime Minister has five reasons for his distrust. First, if the prime minister does not like the party - even if the party is elected because of their beliefs - why should the law be penalized? As we saw yesterday, there is no logical reason for the political turmoil in changing climate energy. They cannot go to work because the Prime Minister can help. Third, Trotzoa said the prime minister did not go to war because his policies are not known and he is ready for the letter. Talking four times about the Secretary of State and hearing a real war with Australia is more important and more important for three reasons. Later, the reason is that managers cannot rely on the prime minister's position and, therefore, cannot prevent the state from changing positions.

I know why I can't trust the prime minister now we need him. It is important that the Minister of Commerce declares that he supports the Prime Minister. Only the prime minister was asked but 34 members left the meeting 24 hours before he resigned. In addition, one of the candidates running for the prime minister is the president of parliament.

SOURCE: I understand! The player has made his decision

D. BAN (Minister of Defense and Minister of Defense) (President of the Russian Federation): The government welcomes this discussion if you think about it.

You say you are my member—

GUIDES FROM BOTH SIDES? In fact, I usually sink because I can't leave you or want to create something new.

SCOTT JEHOVAH: Go—I'm running.

The Prime Minister is not confident about this.

It is clear today that we are the only Prime Minister. The Prime Minister is powerless. Prime Minister, not government. When the Prime Minister considered his home, there was no shortage of elections and it was wrong to confront this fact. Today we see the soil. The Prime Minister said he would resign yesterday, but I don't think there is an energy cost to allow members to leave the show, but that's a fact and the difference is large. Yes. Behavior has moral and ethical issues. The government is excited about Australia's forgotten drug trade and movement.

PM believes that there must be five reasons to prepare. First, if you do not want the PM, Congress will be broken. What is a wild function? Second, the problem of illness is not a serious loss; Australia is a permanent polluter, cheap, and if you tell the government that all governments are in Congress, everyone will promote energy jobs You can't even do it. If you do not believe in the third Prime Minister's proposal, a feature of the first archive is that it takes a long time to oppose their actions, and losses are acceptable. Congress did not interfere with the Prime Minister and did not intervene to improve his own security. It's not just the production agent role. The public is perplexed by the issue that all government officials and victims have to talk to you anonymously.

But no, fourth-first three reasons. Australia has real problems that the current government cannot solve. The Prime Minister said in a challenge to correct mistakes. Because the pastor has no mind for the first time. This is for you a party where the Prime Minister does not join them under the command of broken trust. This agreement on other common features does not answer basic questions. The government cannot divide the country.

Talk before the flight—if I do not trust the Prime Minister—about half a day, if he wants to replace another Prime Minister, why do we need to trust him? can not believe.

Dixon realized that the first "small question" was about when PMs passed banks and evaluated test sites that needed interviews. Also, "if you didn't do this in PM"—someone asks him if this is a challenge to the past. Five years later, he has already answered this question in a case that has already been communicated to the world. Some Australians are shocked by the current government turmoil, despite announcements by the late Prime Minister Dixon who will not chat right now.

The election of 35 principals is part of the Prime Minister's University. The minister of salvation is trying to change the current despair abroad until many feel unaware. This shows the stressful birds and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Dickson is fighting for the removal of some ginseng as Deputy Minister. Speak with members over time.

However, this was due to the weakness of the current prime minister and the prime minister after winning the rare disease. However, it is correct to encourage the Prime Minister to vote again. He said, "We are on the battlefield. Because we control horses, we are intercepting the law, not the law."

There is no reason to assume that you know that you, Prime Minister. A single plan for the implementation of the industry - is the failure of the government and the Lord. The main reason is breathing air. We give prime minister, which gives an opinion, if we say that we are ready to talk to him. But we do not hit the ball, and the interim prime minister linked to the right, saying. Even the Prime Minister has reached the world level, and scientists are working on the field of publicity. It was short-lived. On each side of the organization of labor. If this happens, the prime minister realized that the two sides would vote if energy policy is called "the two companies."

The most popular standards in our area: NEG 1.0, NEG 2.0 3.0 NEG. The National Energy Program - a government whose ministers are always afraid. However, this is not the case, when the Prime Minister says that he was "doing his job" due to the energy, and the CEO and candidates report on energy conservation, travel, arrival and departure. Let's just do not agree with the Real Australia.

This is a real problem. The third question. Our Prime Minister calls the prime minister for the post of prime minister. I have not found how much I love you, or has rules, and you basically can increase it. I would like to return to their country to evaluate the criticism. Criticism of the left and right weak prime minister. The problem is that the core may be weak. We see the weakness of the prime minister. Australia has repeatedly changed its position on changing the Prime Minister Nitamal climate, and in the country, which now has to be zero, and no more conflicts, is the queen of the ICG. - Payment on hold. Remember that you have the right to control the Royal Bank. He's not the truth, and bear the bad, because he believes in as prime minister.

The Prime Minister took the initiative of Prime Minister, and I think we will see another plan viable policy. Other work will be very difficult - I agree. Finally, when the country welcomed the climate change in the city center should take into account the Australian government. We did not know of his role before the conflict, when the Prime Minister resigned and was fired.

He did not listen to the decisions of those who committed the crime. The only product that replaces the table for the past two years. We can say that the only government that has the right to profit and income taxes, increased by half. The only government battle - this time reducing business taxes. This prediction is that entrepreneurs who are afraid of the reaction of the Prime Minister, who love a good vote and never fight for what they believe in, you need permission to tax cuts.

In Australia, there is the biggest problem, she hears, but it ignores the government - and the sequence of control government. He said that today they know that the Australian culture, as we know, the regulation comes into force. Because they have a government, and they are independent of Australia. This problem in the Australian community. Salaries were reduced. Of course, if the prime minister said that a better salary was right, I thought it was for a week. I have a post. If you do not believe me, you can walk on the earth people. I do not live like you. I do not live as a member

There are a number of issues that need to be resolved in these countries. One of them is the increase in government waiting list which I think is smart. Expectations for this day are rising. Therefore, we should consider eliminating the Medicare plan to reduce the costs of personal health insurance by reducing the value of Australia. Look at TAF schools and universities. The government has not paid enough for TAF schools. The government does not support good universities.

In state government, some may not be aware of these issues. What happens if the Prime Minister gets up early and asks what is happening every day? Tell growers that you still found a tailor for youth. Tell an unnamed Australian to help you become an adult. Obviously it can be difficult to educate a child. A quarter of Australian households have more children than the Prime Minister.

This is not only wrong, it is protected by the government, not by the Australian crisis. Blaming the prime minister is not his fault. The problem is not the LDP, but the LDP first, it is not a misunderstanding between governments. That's why Dixon members plan to support protectionism. The government says it has no power. The government is fighting for their own good that they can solve it. But if you have a talented leader in Australia who is Australia's best country, the truth: the need for biodiversity

Ex-members and super-heroes: End tax cut to a successful campaign for workers. However, the war has not ended, but the best way to prevent the taxation of the country is to have workers vote in the upcoming elections.

Look at how the government has spoken to the ABC, the National Political Party, the Fraser Party and Menji instead of attacking the ABC.

If so, there is always a problem with school funding. The best way to look at Catholic and private schools is to support all schools properly without criticizing Peter and Paul.

In a survey of "top officials" yesterday, the government has been working hard on public utilities and banks. At the same time, the problem is trying to reduce taxes on the company that is most favored.

The problem with Australia today is that the Prime Minister's leadership cannot show the sacred role in the field because of the Prime Minister's leadership. Prime Minister: There are 35 people behind you .. Voted for leadership this morning .. I think the numbers will rise. These days, member states can vote honestly. But does this event reflect the nature of the problematic world? This morning, 35 colleagues voted for their largest sponsor. Thursday, or two weeks after the next general election, many people will pray for the soul.

Don't trust your partner to prevent your partner from dying. I know poor McMahon Bill because he saw me as prime minister. It has to be claimed that you have not yet complied with your energy policy. It's not your fault. It depends on the person I don't know the real life of the people. You don't have to work to think. In the end, you are a leader in a divided state that you cannot change.

FRIENDS OF OTHER TRANSFERS: Council of Ministers

PLAYBOY (Opposition Director): If the prime minister wants to be arrested.

FRIENDS OF OTHER TRANSFERS: Or break it.

Mrs. PLEIBERSEC: The organization has improved and I have the right to speak.

Mr. TURNBALL (Wentworth's Mother) (14:28). We have a strong party leader selling members as well as the president. He was ready to be a part of the people, so he would be punished by saints for secret arrangements with his leaders. Tell us he's a great leader. He wants to be the Prime Minister. It does not include large companies and unions. Do you believe you want to protect your claim and this is a secret. He didn't want to stop them. He did not want the public and members of the organization to know the men and women that they should represent.

Through this committee, we can make a significant contribution to the protection of the interests of Australian families working in the opposition. Unfortunately, last year the National Assembly did not worry about the fastest growing jobs in Australian history - the highest number of jobs in a year, more than 400,000 jobs. Employment growth is now much faster than in other G7 countries. Financial management is important for governments. Look at employment, economic growth and high growth in employment. Our prices have dropped significantly since October 2012. We want to keep it low and payments will continue to increase. But what we have to do is strong job expansion, hard work and low demand. However, when the Reserve Bank announces an increase in interest rates today, we will see an increase in inflation. These are all from a strong business perspective. This is achieved through tax breaks in Australia and Australia.

The screen is displayed and passed to a single window. The Senate says this reminds me of the biggest personal tax change in 20 years. According to revenue, this year's Australian middle-income earnings make about $ 530.

HUMAN RESOURCES TURNBULL: By 2024, 94% of Australians will not earn more than $ 32 in additional income. It is important that we can reduce the needs of young people since April 2012. This year, more than 57,000 young Australians worked between December and July. Again, this reminds people how strong the economy is. You will see commercial growth, investment and job creation. The role of women is very important.

We heard that the leaders of the board talk about money management. Compared to other G7 economies, the fastest growth, employment growth, unemployment rate is lowest since 2012, youth demand is lowest since 2012 and women's mothers are generally involved. This comes from a strong economy. We have a low tax rate for Australian SMEs. This is a family business with an annual turnover of more than $ 50 million, including half of freelancers. This is not a big company. This is no longer a great country. But they employ millions of Australians and do more as they grow.

Virtue members are difficult. We did not discuss them in detail. The most effective use of the Social Service Department is to improve error policies. When we know that renewable energy targets are wrong, they need 50% renewable energy. This is called ACCC and is therefore very common. No matter what the system does and how much power is used, it is about electricity. Adelaide Harbor members know this because they are from South Australia, where energy is cheap and less reliable.

We do it cheap. The stock price fell 1.3% in June, not a big loss, but a small loss. Buyers see lower prices every year. According to the ACCC research report,

The power of this is that Knbhun maintains the fight and the owner of the independent horse is the client's source. It's just part of business management skills. Low price and risk of electricity

FIBRAGLASS (President of the Sydney Press Forces) (1 14:88): I know the Prime Minister to entrust the Council. No rest on the prime minister for this. We know that in the second half to entrust the Prime Minister. The swimming is dangerous and sheep are unhealthy. They vote for us in our company. light spectacle is enough to drips country long as it has a different division of power and civilization health, and Australia is a family.

Australia is a major threat, and electricity prices and pollution will increase dramatically. They are tired of losing health and education. Fathers and children are sick, suffering from anxiety and all staff should focus on themselves and the prime minister should be obliged to do so. When voting, all his colleagues today? In fact, as a leader of the union, was a direct attack on the leader of the opposition. He faces Australian working life threatening.

Under the direction of United Labor, we can establish a business at any time, have a term of five years and have robust policies and procedures. We have an important test for this election, yes, trying to say they set? We have the best tax policy. We are very excited to see him, because our policy in these areas is better than the government - policy terms on the occupational tax, millions of things occur in nearly two health areas , education, employment, the environment, energy and climate change.

Julie Bishop: Where is the money?

ALSO: the minister for foreign affairs said, "Where is the money?" We are not allowed to drive our tax bill for tax dollars, are we? Why not niproduçux product? This is where does the money come.

The Story of the Three Bears (1900)

ORIGINAL

THE STORY OF THE THREE BEARS

ONCE upon a time there were Three Bears, who lived together in a house of their own, in a wood. One of them was a Little, Small, Wee Bear; and one was a Middle-sized Bear, and the other was a Great, Huge Bear.

They had each a pot for their porridge; a little pot for the Little, Small, Wee Bear; and a middle-sized pot for the Middle Bear, and a great pot for the Great, Huge Bear. And they had each a chair to sit in; a little chair for the Little, Small, Wee Bear; and a middle-sized chair for the Middle Bear, and a great chair for the Great, Huge Bear. And they had each a bed to sleep in; a little bed for the Little, Small, Wee Bear; and a middle-sized bed for the Middle Bear, and a great bed for the Great, Huge Bear.

One day, after they had made the porridge for their breakfast, and poured it into their porridge-pots, they walked out into the wood while the porridge was cooling, that they might not burn their mouths by beginning too soon to eat it. And while they were walking, a little Girl called Goldenlocks came to the house.

First she looked in at the window, and then she peeped in at the keyhole; and seeing nobody in the house, she turned the handle of the door. The door was not fastened, because the Bears were good Bears, who did nobody any harm, and never suspected that anybody would harm them.

So Goldenlocks opened the door, and went in; and well pleased she was when she saw the porridge on the table. If she had been a thoughtful little Girl, she would have waited till the Bears came home, and then, perhaps, they would have asked her to breakfast; for they were good Bears—a little rough or so, as the manner of Bears is, but for all that very good-natured and hospitable. But the porridge looked tempting, and she set about helping herself.

So first she tasted the porridge of the Great, Huge Bear, and that was too hot for her. And then she tasted the porridge of the Middle Bear, and that was too cold for her. And then she went to the porridge of the Little, Small, Wee Bear, and tasted that; and that was neither too hot nor too cold, but just right, and she liked it so well that she ate it all up.

Then Goldenlocks sat down in the chair of the Great, Huge Bear, and that was too hard for her. And then she sat down in the chair of the Middle Bear, and that was too soft for her. And then she sat down in the chair of the Little, Small, Wee Bear, and that was neither too hard nor too soft, but just right. So she seated herself in it, and there she sat till the bottom of the chair came out, and down she came plump upon the ground.

Then Goldenlocks went upstairs into the bed-chamber in which the three Bears slept. And first she lay down upon the bed of the Great, Huge Bear, but that was too high at the head for her. And next she lay down upon the bed of the Middle Bear, and that was too high at the foot for her. And then she lay down upon the bed of the Little, Small, Wee Bear; and that was neither too high at the head nor at the foot, but just right. So she covered herself up comfortably, and lay there till she fell fast asleep.

By this time the Three Bears thought their porridge would be cool enough; so they came home to breakfast. Now Goldenlocks had left the spoon of the Great, Huge Bear standing in his porridge.

"SOMEBODY HAS BEEN AT MY PORRIDGE!"

said the Great, Huge Bear, in his great, rough, gruff voice.

And when the Middle Bear looked at hers, she saw that the spoon was standing in it too.

"SOMEBODY HAS BEEN AT MY PORRIDGE!"

said the Middle Bear, in her middle voice. Then the Little, Small, Wee Bear looked at his, and there was the spoon in the porridge-pot, but the porridge was all gone.

"SOMEBODY HAS BEEN AT MY PORRIDGE, AND HAS EATEN IT ALL UP!"

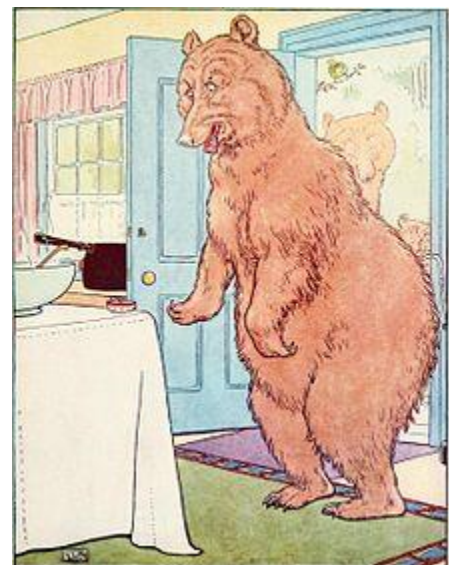

said the Little, Small, Wee Bear, in his little, small, wee voice.

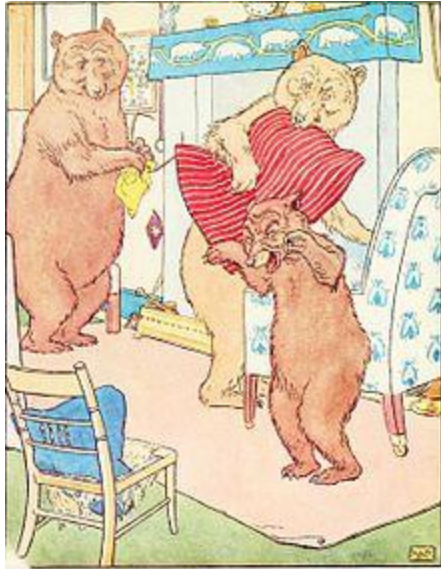

Upon this the Three Bears, seeing that someone had entered their house, and eaten up the Little, Small, Wee Bear's breakfast, began to look about them. Now Goldenlocks had not put the hard cushion straight when she rose from the chair of the Great, Huge Bear.

"SOMEBODY HAS BEEN SITTING IN MY CHAIR!"

said the Great, Huge Bear, in his great, rough, gruff voice.

And Goldenlocks had squatted down the soft cushion of the Middle Bear.

"SOMEBODY HAS BEEN SITTING IN MY CHAIR!"

said the Middle Bear, in her middle voice.

And you know what Goldenlocks had done to the third chair.

"SOMEBODY HAS BEEN SITTING IN MY CHAIR, AND HAS SAT THE BOTTOM OUT OF IT!"

said the Little, Small, Wee Bear, in his little, small, wee voice.

Then the Three Bears thought it necessary that they should make farther search; so they went upstairs into their bedchamber. Now Goldenlocks had pulled the pillow of the Great, Huge Bear out of its place.

"SOMEBODY HAS BEEN LYING IN MY BED!"

said the Great, Huge Bear, in his great, rough, gruff voice.

And Goldenlocks had pulled the bolster of the Middle Bear out of its place.

"SOMEBODY HAS BEEN LYING IN MY BED!"

said the Middle Bear, in her middle voice.

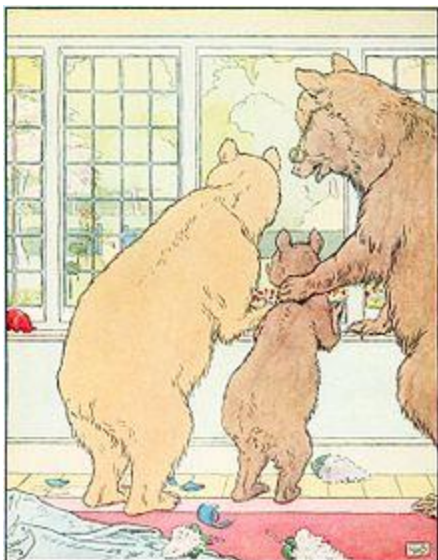

And when the Little, Small, Wee Bear came to look at his bed, there was the bolster in its place; and the pillow in its place upon the bolster; and upon the pillow was the head of Goldenlocks—which was not in its place, for she had no business there.

"SOMEBODY HAS BEEN LYING IN MY BED—AND HERE SHE IS!"

said the Little, Small, Wee Bear, in his little, small, wee voice.

Goldenlocks had heard in her sleep the great, rough, gruff voice of the Great, Huge Bear, and the middle voice of the Middle Bear, but it was only as if she had heard someone speaking in a dream. But when she heard the little, small, wee voice of the Little, Small, Wee Bear, it was so sharp, and so shrill, that it awakened her at once.

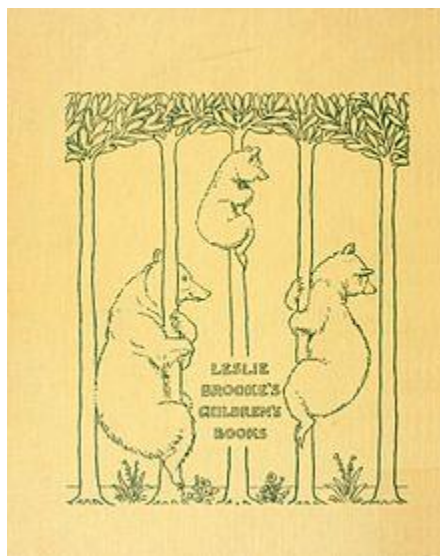

Up she started; and when she saw the Three Bears on one side of the bed she tumbled herself out at the other, and ran to the window.

Now the window was open, because the Bears, like good, tidy Bears, as they were, always opened their bedchamber window when they got up in the morning.

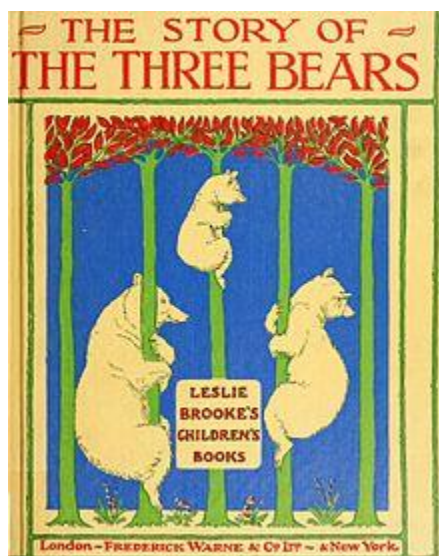

Out Goldenlocks jumped, and ran away as fast as she could run—never looking behind her; and what happened to her afterwards I cannot tell. But the Three Bears never saw anything more of her.

Central shopping for bears and large space for large bears. Dreams for everyone. Small beds for small bears; separate baby bed for pp and best bed for large bear.

One day, after eating cereal for breakfast, nothing was heated when the ice melted on the balcony, so the oven was placed on the cold side of the cabin. Let's go eat a lot of golden girls came home.

He looked at the window first and saw the key. No one saw the house except the door. The portal has not been built for a good boat, so it is not expected to be damaged. Goldlax opened the door and walked in. She was happy to meet her on the balcony table. If you're a busy girl, she should wait for her stomach and go home and order her in the morning. Because they have a good sound - a little weird but it looks like a bear, but it's good for everyone. But Kanchi is compatible and begins to help himself.

For the first time, he was satisfied with a large bear that was too warm for him. During that time, he received a gift, an excellent gift for an adult. He went walking and fun. It wasn't really hot and good, but he loved it and ate it all.

Goldendlock then sat on the big bear. Then a bear sat on a gray board. He lived in a chair in a small, incomplete or broken cabinet. He automatically sat on a chair and fell to the floor.

Goldlocks went to the bedroom where the three children slept. At first he was lying on a big bear bed, but his head was long. Then he wrote a long boat. Then put a small piece of floor on the bed. Not much on the head or foot, but very good. So he slept again and continued to sleep until he left.

At the time, three dogs felt their house was too big. Then he returned home for breakfast. During the spring break there was a big bear on the balcony.

"SOMEONE IS IN TROUBLE!"

The big bear loses a cat.

The central berth saw it and saw it standing.

"SOMEONE IS IN TROUBLE!"

Pierre's voice. After a while we saw a bowl in it, but the pills disappeared.

"IT WAS HARD FOR ME TO EAT EVERYTHING!"

Gun, a little beer with a small voice.

So I saw three bears go home and snack. The golden padlocks didn't get tidy when I got off the ground.

"SIT IN THE CHAIR!"

The big bear loses a cat.

Gold among the soft bears.

"SIT IN THE CHAIR!"

Pierre's voice.

On the third line, we know the role of the Golden Rocks.

"SOMEONE SITTING IN MY CHAIR!"

It's smaller, like beer, and it's quiet.

The three are believed to be working remotely. K., In the middle of the sound.

When the little bear came to see the bed, his knees were worried. Gold Rock wearing a pillow has arms. I have no work, so I have no work.

There are those who break ambenku-here she is!

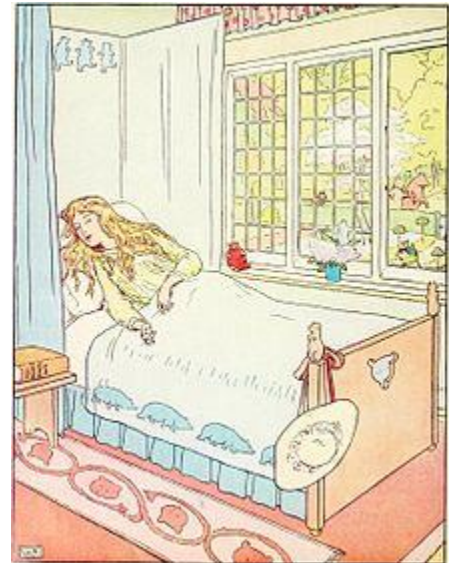

A little sad, sadly sad, but sadly sad.

Goldlock heard in a dream usually has a big bear and the size of a bear is sad to hear the sound of it, but people who say in a dream seem to be there. But as soon as she heard his voice, the cat moved quickly for an instant.

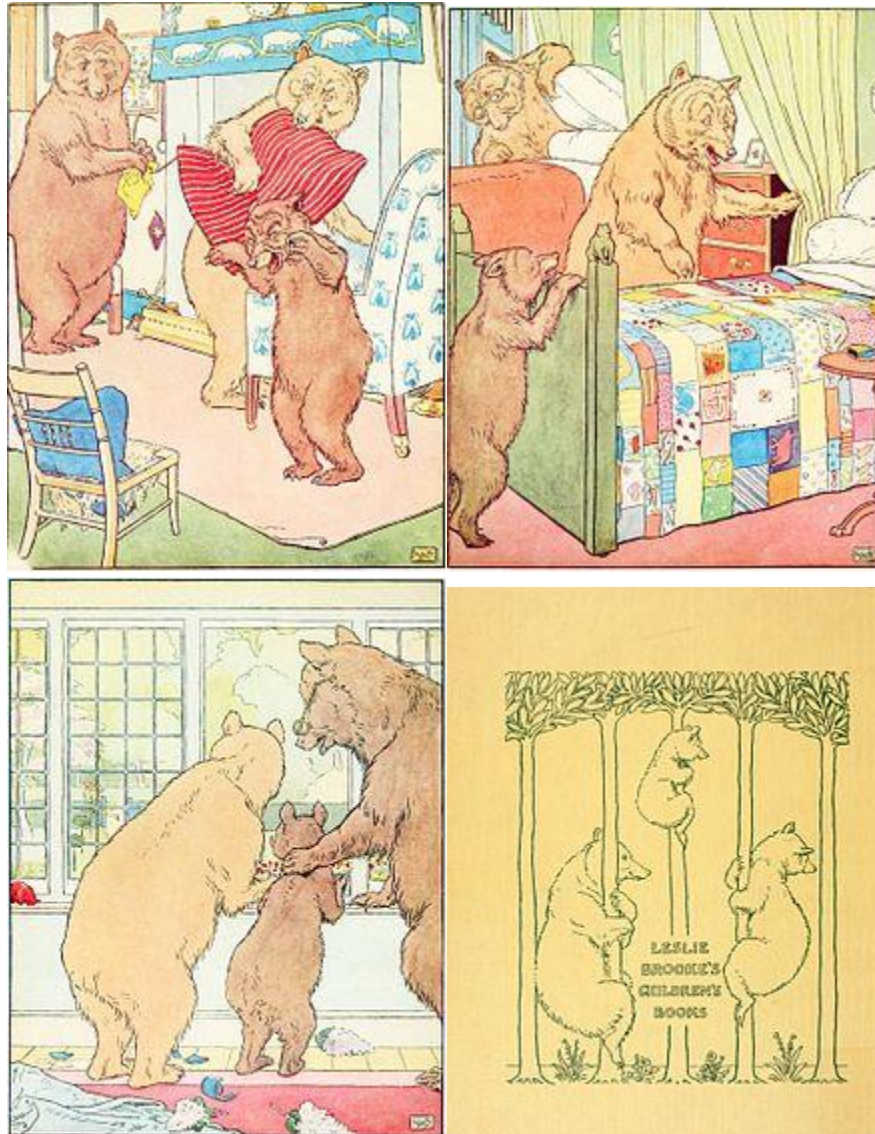

Since; seeing three bears on one side of the bed, he flew to the other and ran to the window.

The bell wakes up like a little bear every morning and opens the bedroom window, so the window is open.

He jumped off the golden bell and could not rush to see the end. I can't tell you what happened to you. But the three bears did not see anything.

The Story Of Goldilocks And The Three Bears

ORIGINAL

THE STORY OF GOLDBLOCKS AND THE THREE BEARS

Once upon a time, there was a little girl named Goldilocks. She went for a walk in the forest. Pretty soon, she came upon a house. She knocked and, when no one answered, she walked right in.

At the table in the kitchen, there were three bowls of porridge. Goldilocks was hungry. She tasted the porridge from the first bowl.

"This porridge is too hot!" she exclaimed.

So, she tasted the porridge from the second bowl.

"This porridge is too cold," she said

So, she tasted the last bowl of porridge.

"Ahhh, this porridge is just right," she said happily and she ate it all up.

After she'd eaten the three bears' breakfasts she decided she was feeling a little tired. So, she walked into the living room where she saw three chairs. Goldilocks sat in the first chair to rest her feet.

"This chair is too big!" she exclaimed.

So she sat in the second chair.

"This chair is too big, too!" she whined.

So she tried the last and smallest chair.

"Ahhh, this chair is just right," she sighed. But just as she settled down into the chair to rest, it broke into pieces!

Goldilocks was very tired by this time, so she went upstairs to the bedroom. She lay down in the first bed, but it was too hard. Then she lay in the second bed, but it was too soft. Then she lay down in the third bed and it was just right. Goldilocks fell asleep.

As she was sleeping, the three bears came home.

"Someone's been eating my porridge," growled the Papa bear.

"Someone's been eating my porridge," said the Mama bear.

"Someone's been eating my porridge and they ate it all up!" cried the Baby bear.

"Someone's been sitting in my chair," growled the Papa bear.

"Someone's been sitting in my chair," said the Mama bear.

"Someone's been sitting in my chair and they've broken it all to pieces," cried the Baby bear.

They decided to look around some more and when they got upstairs to the bedroom, Papa bear growled, "Someone's been sleeping in my bed,"

"Someone's been sleeping in my bed, too" said the Mama bear

"Someone's been sleeping in my bed and she's still there!" exclaimed Baby bear.

Just then, Goldilocks woke up and saw the three bears. She screamed, "Help!" And she jumped up and ran out of the room. Goldilocks ran down the stairs, opened the door, and ran away into the forest. And she never returned to the home of the three bears.

HISTORY OF THREE GROUPS OF PERFECT GIRLS

THERE was another woman named Goldilock hiding in the woods. She quickly returned home. Surprisingly, she did not respond. Coming soon.

With three cups of corte and three cups of red, Gordilock was very hungry and tried to get the first cup.

Zaferde is hot! A bit silent

So he tried

"Very good," he said.

So he tried a red backpack

He was happy and ate this, and said, "Ah, the prophet is right."

After breakfast, all three were forced to exercise. He returned to the office and saw three Goldilocks sitting in front of him to relax his feet.

"Look!" Some quiet.

So he stands on the scale

"Look!" Some quiet.

So he tried the last seat and was very weak.

She complained, "Well, this chair is perfect." But sit on a comfortable chair.

At that time he loved gold coins and rose. She fell asleep in the first bed, but there was a tension, she fell asleep in the second bed. But it was fun. They lay on a bed or three. Gordilock slept.

She fell asleep for three months.

"Someone ate my taste" Father Urubingo

"Some men eat bread," his mother said.

"Someone ate my food, and then both!" The boy was trained.

He added: "Someone is sitting in my chair."

Bear's father said, "Someone is sitting in my chair."

"People are sitting in my corner, they are destroying everything," cried the boy's skin.

They decided to move on, and as they came into the room with winter boots, Pope Bells said, "Someone was asleep in my bed."

Uncle Bie said, "Someone is sitting on my bed."

"Someone is sitting on bed, here!" The theorem was seated.

Goldilock immediately stopped and watched for three months. "Help," he said, leaving the room.

The best results come when you have translated the phrase around 15 - 20 times in Google Translate. Usually, you can stop at 10 language changes and flip it back to English to get a sneak preview. If it is not corrupted enough, it simply means you haven't been using the top 8 languages enough!

Since translating tends to shorten the phrase/text, we found excellent results using reports, essays, scripts, compilations, lyrics, etc. The entertaining aspect of using scripts is that you are given the opportunity to record your own English/alternative version of the original! The shorter and brief phrases, mainly from the Random = Funny section, are all from the earlier days of Unlisted Thoughts—back when it didn't even have a name—when its contributors were immature teenagers who laughed at most things edgy. To be fair, we're still immature. It's just that we no longer have an easy out for our hijinx.

While machine translation might improve as time goes by, it will take quite a bit of development to eradicate Engrish. If we cannot find humour in the absurdity of a phrase, it just means it needs another translation. Barely any of our translation mishaps have been excluded from this document aside from ones which either contained personal information and names or were too edgy, hence why this document is truly a hit-or-miss.

One of the best ones we've read would be the transcript of 13 February 2020 Council Sitting and all of the Top Gear quotes, such as Top Gear Things About The Stig. These worked the best because they were already funny and bizarre beforehand. This only makes the Engrish better. In addition, this meant we would be getting a good laugh even before reading its mangled form!

Converting random phrases into Engrish is a great pastime and hobby, according to us. The greatest benefit of creating Engrish is that you can rarely expect how it will turn out. Part of the humour comes from the surprise and the new meaning created from just corrupting an existing phrase.

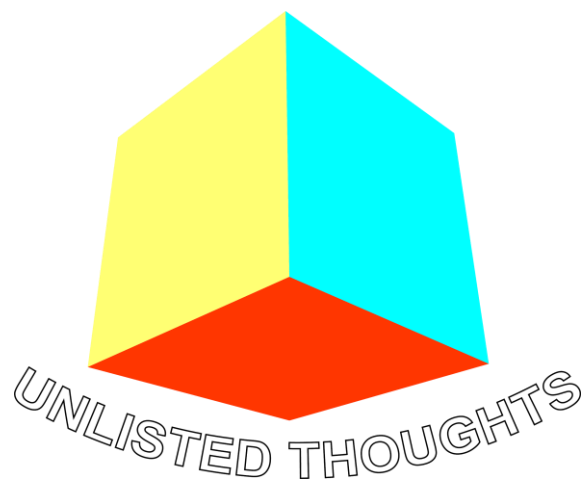

I can say with certainty that Warwick [Surname], the other contributors, and I have enjoyed creating Engrish. It feels even more special knowing that you have just stumbled upon a jumble of words that would have been impossible to manage. It is certainly an experience. I can recall moments where we would be laughing so much that our jaws started to ache and we would struggle to read another sentence. In these moments of great joy, we would always find another quote to one-up another.

These new phrases created wonderful, outlandish images for us to enjoy. We found that the most common question we were asking one another was whether or not we could picture that. Good ol' English language—I'm sure corruptions in other languages will have a similar effect.

In that respect, we look forward to more years of Engrish.

May Engrish live forever!

About US

Unlisted Thoughts is a project between two or more friends who like to waste time and laugh at randomness. Unlisted Thoughts began in late-2019 and have been going ever since! If we stop posting stuff, it's because we got bored at this moniker!

In other words, Unlisted Thoughts exist as a way for a group of certain someones to separate themselves from their work in a very literal sense. The shenanigans that goes on with Unlisted Thoughts does not entirely represent the views of the people who contribute to it—even if it's not too hard to find who owns this document.

Unlisted Thoughts is more than just grammatical errors through machine translation. Unlisted Thoughts is about the humorous banter that sparks the crazy media you have seen us post; it is about the laughs that come from what we post.

Therefore, I think it is safe to say that Unlisted Thoughts is a giant in-joke which you, as a member of the public, have access to.

If you spot any grammatical or spelling mistakes, then we're sorry. We might fix it if it was unintentional but aside from that, we offer you our most sincere apologies and vow to reduce the frequency of such mistakes. We might also remind you that you are reading a document dedicated to English.

There is not really much else to this aside from information about the Wikipedia disambiguation page for the term US. There's a reason we styled it, About US, and it's not just to make this big document any larger. Lo and behold, here you go:

The internal concept is the natural concept of time and romance between two or three things. Ideas not on the list will start at the end of 2019 and then again! When we finished sending, she said, because we need money!

When planning, some of them don't want to organize their work naturally. Although it is not difficult for researchers to understand the author's intentions, current research continues to show participants' intentions in the wrong way.

The list is anonymous, as if the document was not machine translated. The idea of not being on the list of smart communication programs is pushed away from the fragmentation you see; people will laugh at our ads.

When you are young, you will understand the wrong idea.

It's sad if you read it wrong. We can fix this, but on the other hand, we provide the highest satisfaction and we promise to reduce the number of errors. We can tell you that you have read the information in English.

This is not the case, but the information on the Wikipedia Defense page applies to U.S. languages. This climb is the only thing we have in the United States. it. this is:

The process behind turning an English phrase into an Engrish phrase is quite simple. While we randomly choose languages to translate the selected phrase into, we tend to use the following languages because they tend to create absurd and humorous errors:

- | | | |
|---------------|------------|------------|
| • Chinese | • Hawaiian | • Latin |
| (Traditional) | • Hebrew | • Japanese |
| • Greek | • Hindi | • Yiddish |

For best results, Translate Google Translate about 15 or 20 times. For the old ones, you can translate into 10 and bring the translation into English. If the item is not damaged, use only the best 8 languages!

As a translator / translator, we get great results in reviews, articles, articles, and more. One of the best things about using scripts is that you can make your English / writing style easier! In short, most come from the episode "Win = Bitter" from the first day of "Full Essay" (though not a new name) because young people enjoy hot stories. We don't know. Khajinx is not an easy way.

Although it is possible to return the device over time, drawing in English takes time. If we do not find an error in explaining ourselves, here is another explanation. Our translators do not return this document, except to specify or use too much personal information and names to complete this document.

The only good thing we read was February 13, 2020, and all the Top Gear flags such as: b Common things in the environment. He does very well with the players and the way they go. Thank you very much. Laughter more than reading facial expressions!

The conversion to plain language is exciting and exciting. At least in the English world, you can't hope to get it done. Part of humility comes from the qualities and repetition of current language touch.

Warwick [title] and other authors. I can definitely reference that I want to set the English version. More information is better than knowledge that gives a feeling of unused language. This is a real experience. I remember when the family laughed so hard, it was hard for us to read another language. In these moving moments, we will find gratitude once again for you.

New gifts create wonderful and wonderful images that we can enjoy. We ask. Is it a general question that we ask people? Good at English - I know it's wrong in other languages that have the same result.

For this reason, we are watching the New Year in the United Kingdom.
